WASHINGTON, Thursday, Oct. 16, 1862.

The following special dispatch for the TIMES is just received, dated

BEYOND HALLTOWN, Va., Thursday, Oct. 16, 1862.

This morning, soon after 6 o'clock, a reconnoissance in force, under Gen. HANCOCK, and comprising the same General's entire Division, with Gen. DANA's Brigade from SEDGWICK's Division, and under command of Col. LEE, of the Twentieth Massachusetts Regiment, together with four batteries, two regiments of cavalry and one battery of flying artillery, left Bolivar Heights and proceeded out on the Winchester and Harper's Ferry turnpike, toward Charlestown, in the following order:

First, the Sixth New-York Cavalry, Col. DEVIAN, together with a battery of Flying Artillery, under the command of Lieut.-Col. MCVICKERS First Battalion.

Next, the Fifty-third, Sixty-fourth and First Minnesota, of the Third Brigade, under Col. BROOKS.

Following these, were TOMPKINS' First Rhode Island Battery, six pieces.

The remainder of the Third Brigade, under Col. Locke.

Next, Capt. THOMAS' Fourth United States Artillery with six pieces.

Following, came the Second Brigade, under the brave and able Gen. CALDWELL.

Capt. PETTIT's celebrated First New-York Battery, with six pieces, were next in order.

Following them was the First Brigade, under Gen. MEAGHER.

Next, the Brigade of Gen. DANA, from Gen. SEDGWICK's Division, under the command of Col. LEE, and joining us afterward, were a battalion of cavalry, the Third Indiana.

In this order they advanced until just after passing Halltown, which is some two miles from Harper's Ferry. A battery of the rebels, comprising certainly not more than four pieces, here opened at short range upon our advance—their range being so short as to fail to reach the parties for whom it was intended. The Fourth Regular Battery, under Lieut. DICKENSON, promptly returned their fire, and with such effectiveness as to completely silence them in something less than half an hour, although failing to force them at once to retire.

The infantry regiments under the command of Gens. CALDWELL and MEAGHER, and Col. JOCKE, and detachments from other regiments, under Col. LEE, were then drawn up in line of battle in columns, by division, on each side of the road, the batteries, under Capts. PETTIT and THOMPSON, keeping along the turnpike and passing to the front, beyond the line of battle thus formed, and posting themselves on an eminence just in front of the infantry.

Soon after the line of infantry, who were posted on the right of the road, commenced to send out their skirmishers, and as they advanced without molestation, gradually the infantry advanced as they proceeded; so did the batteries, cavalry and infantry supporting, who were to the left of the road. Gradually, all advanced, until the whole column was again in motion, and, carefully feeling their way toward the enemy—the enemy retreated on to Charlestown.

Our forces no doubt have possession of Charlestown. From appearances it looked as though they took immediate possession. There was no severe firing after 11 o'clock.

KILLED—MR. ELMORE.

WOUNDED—RICHARD COGAN, right leg amputated; JAMES CORNHILL, left hand and face, by shell; PETER CAMPBELL, shell in head; and Mr. PATRICK and Mr CARPENTER, slightly.

The Adjutant of the First Minnesota had his horse shot from under him.

I could not learn of any other casualties. All the above belong to Company A, Fourth Regular Artillery.

LATER.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Oct. 16—10 P. M.

The following special dispatches are received from our correspondents with the Army of the Potomac:

CHARLESTOWN, Va., Thursday, Oct. 16—8 P. M.

Gen. MCCLELLAN and Staff advanced boldly to the front of the village. The rebel cavalry pickets were to be seen on the next hill.

LEE is at Winchester, with a large force, and JACKSON at Bunker's Hill, with another large force. STUART's Cavalry is on the Shenandoah. A large rebel force is at Leestowe, six miles away.

Our forces are deployed out; CALDWELL's Brigade on the right front; the Fifth New-Hampshire on the left; the Sixth Regular Cavalry on the extreme front of the village, and cavalry and infantry and artillery scattered through the village. The Sixth New-York Cavalry are two miles in the rear, to prevent a flank movement.

Seventy rebel wounded have been taken.

We had a cold reception from a few Union men. There is a great scarcity of food for man and beast.

One negro is confined in JOHN BROWN's jail. The field where he was executed is planted with corn. The negroes are gleeful.

The enemy is expected to be reinforced. Gen MCCLELLAN returns to-night.

I learn from the people that JEFF. DAVIS has issued a proclamation that all Union officers held and captured shall be put to hard labor, if the Lincoln Proclamation is carried out.

My predictions in Tuesday's TIMES are verified.

There is much joy over the success at Charlestown.

Gen. MCCLELLAN has not yet returned. There is a furious storm.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Oct. 16—12 P. M.

We have just received the following from our special correspondent, dated

FREDERICK, Thursday, Oct. 16—11½ P. M.

A dispatch from our correspondent at Sharpsburgh announces that HUMPHREY's Division of PORTER's Corps crossed the Potomac this morning at 6 o'clock. They arrived at Shepardstown without any artillery, but the enemy having a number of pieces we fell back upon the advance of our forces.

REPORTS FROM HEADQUARTERS.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Thursday Evening, Oct. 16.

An important reconnoissance was made, to-day, by a portion of the Army of the Potomac, in the direction of Winchester. The Division of Gen. HANCOCK, late Gen. RICHARDSON's, left Harper's Ferry at an early hour this morning, on the road to Charlestown.

Three miles from Bolivar they came upon the enemy's outer pickets, who retired as our troops advanced, until within one-half a mile of Charlestown, when they formed in line of battle, with dismounted skirmishers thrown to the front. Having no infantry, they covered the approaches to Charlestown by two pieces of artillery on the left, and three upon the right of the turnpike, with the view of disputing our occupation of the town.

A battery was soon brought into position and opened with shell and solid shot, which was promptly replied to by the five rebel pieces already in position. The engagement, which was carried on wholly by artillery, lasted two hours, when the rebels fell back to the hills beyond the town.

Our loss was one man killed and eight wounded. Capt. SMITH, of the artillery, and eight men were wounded and taken prisoners, which is the only loss they are known to have sustained.

The troops, under Gen. HANCOCK, enterhd Charlestown about 12 o'clock, and occupied it, the enemy leaving in our hands over one hundred, who were wounded at the battle of Antietam.

At 4 o'clock the infantry formed in line of battle on the right and left of the road leading to Bunker's Hill when they advanced, driving the enemy from the hills, and at dark occupying a position two miles beyond the town.

Information obtained to-day shows that the main body of the rebel army occupy a position extending from Bunker's Hill to the Shenandoah.

Gen. MCCLELLAN arrived at Charlestown at 2 o'clock, where he remained during the night.

But very little Union feeling was shown by the people of Charleston upon its occupation by our troops.

THE LATE REBEL RAID.

Doings of the Rebels around Chambersburgh—Movements of National Troops—A Scare at Gettysburgh—Great Numbers of Fine Horses Captured—The Stable Doors Shut too Late.

GETTYSBURGH, Penn., Sunday, Oct. 12, 1862.

I wrote from Harrisburgh and telegraphed from Carlisle yesterday whatever I could learn, reliably, of the movements and doings of the rebels in and about Chambersburgh. If some of the statements should prove incorrect, it must be attributed to the excited state of the public mind, and to the habit people have of exaggerating, or seeing double, when the rebels are around. In the midst of so many and often conflicting reports, it is no easy matter to get at the exact truth. Under these circumstances, I was most fortunate in meeting at Carlisle the excellent President of the Cumberland Valley Railroad, who, besides his intimate acquaintance with all the towns, roads and mountain passes in this part of Pennsylvania, had great and important interests at stake, and consequently, was in a position to be correctly informed. In the main facts, therefore, already recited, I think the TIMES has been not far from the truth.

Hearing last evening that the rebel cavalry had taken the road to Gettysburgh, I determined to take the same direction from Carlisle, so as to be conveniently near to the scene of operations.

MOVEMENTS OF OUR TROOPS.

By dint of great industry and hard work, on the part of Gov. CURTIN and Gen. WOOL, a considerable infantry and cavalry force was got ready during the afternoon of Saturday, and the intention was, I understand, to send eighteen hundred infantry, with a battery, to Carlisle. Subsequent information, however, caused a change in the plan. Gen. WOOL and Staff arrived at Carlisle last evening, and held a consultation with the President of the railroad, and also availed himself of such telegraphic intelligence as could be obtained from the direction of Chambersburgh. He then returned to Harrisburgh, and put the troops in motion over the Northern Central Railroad to the Gettysburgh and Hanover Junction. By some unaccountable delay, these troops, which, I learn, were at the Junction at midnight, did not reach Gettysburgh until this afternoon. Had they been a day or even twelve hours sooner, they would have been able to march on the rebels, with a good prospect of overtaking them outside of this town. I very much fear they are now too late.

ADVANCE OF THE CAVALRY FROM THE POTOMAC.

Three companies of RUSH's Pennsylvania Cavalry, numbering one hundred and seventy men, (and lances with red flags on the end of them—they look well) came up from below and passed through Emmetsburgh yesterday afternoon. They have three wagons with them, and arrived safely in Gettysburgh about 7 o'clock, P. M.

MOVEMENTS OF THE REBEL CAVALRY.

Half an hour after this cavalry force of ours passed through Emmetsburgh, a body of rebel cavalry came into the town, and were evidently traveling with some haste toward the Potomac, with a view of crossing at some of the lower fords. Here a rebel sympathiser (there are many in the place) in the person of a publican named WILD, I am informed, told the commander of the force that if he went to Frederick he would meet with opposition; and if they took the way toward this place they would also find a Union force, and advised him to turn and go up the Valley again. Obeying these kindly hints, the rebels immediately turned off at the Village of ——— and went up to Habaugh Valley, a place about eight miles beyond Fairfield, and sixteen from Gettysburgh. Here Mr. HABAUGH reports the whole rebel force encamped at three o'clock this (Sunday) morning, and another reliable person says they were there as late as ten o'clock this forenoon. This is on the route to Mercersburgh, by which they came in. Now, it is just possible that the rebels have separated into two or even three parts, and that they may thus attempt to recross the river at as many different points at the same time. Such a course would serve to create misunderstanding, and would increase their chances of escape. As they have been seen in so many different places, nearly at the same time, it is evident, I think, that they have been operating in two or three separate squadrons. They move with great rapidity from one place to the other when on the march, and when operating in a given locality they moderate their speed, sending out scouts (horse thieves) in all directions, and gathering up every good horse they can find.

HOW THEY SWEPT FRANKLIN TOWNSHIP.

The marauders have gathered up one hundred and fifty horses in Franklin Township alone. In Cashtown, eight miles from Gettysburgh, where there is almost everything but cash, they made an extensive haul. Scarcely a good horse, or horse of any kind, is left to the farmers in the whole region.

Major MUSSELMAN had five taken, each of which he valued at $150.

ANDREW HARTMAN, who made some resistance, lost three, and was also carried off himself for not acquiescing in the robbery.

Mr. SHEALEY had two or three taken.

Major CULVERSON, of Fairfield, lost one or two; JOHN MICKLEY, six; WM. WAMPERS, two or three; WM. WIERMAN, two, which were worth $300; EZRA MYERS, four; DANIEL HEINTZELMAN, a relative of the gallant General, four fine animals; JOHN BAUM, four; ——— BERENCKER, three; JAMES MARSHALL, six; WM. CULP, five; and a great many others whose names I could not learn. Altogether, in the vicinity of Cashtown, they carried away sixty-four of the finest horses in the country. Probably they have gobbled up five hundred horses!

WHY THEY DID NOT VISIT GETTYSBURGH.

Some members of the Home Guard being accidentally in town, they went out on the road, and, meeting some stragglers, gave chase to them, capturing one prisoner who was making off with a horse. Observing their movements, the rebels probably took them for an advance guard of a larger force in the town, and thus, no doubt, saved the place from the unwelcome visitors.

LOCKING THE BARN DOOR, ETC.

After the marauders had scoured nearly the whole country round, and seized and led away hundreds of horses, the farmers began to wake up, and proceeded to remove their animals to the rear; it was somewhat difficult to find out where that was, when there was so many different fronts.

On my way from Carlisle, this morning, I observed the farmers hastening away in all directions with their horses. It was, however, a useless proceeding; for by that time the rebels had finished the horse-thieving business, and were eagerly testing the powers of their new-found captives in getting out of reach with their plunder. Some place the number of horses stolen as high as one thousand.

This part of Pennsylvania is celebrated for the thrift of the farmers, and for the excellence of their horses. There is no doubt whatever that the rebel invaders had good pilots in the persons of scoundrelly fellows, well acquainted with the locality, who have sold themselves to the devil and JEFF. DAVIS for a mess of very miserable pottage.

I forgot to mention that the rebel cavalry officers invited themselves to spend the night with Col. J. K. MCCLURE at Chambersburgh, and in the morning took away ten of his horses—about all he had—by way of paying their bill. It was all done with great politeness, though, which no doubt greatly modified the proceedings.

A RECONNOISSANCE TO-DAY—THE REBELS GONE OVER THE RIVER.

Lieut. JAMES B. KING, of ROBERTS' Independent Artillery, went out this afternoon as far as Fayetteville, in company with a squad of Home Guards of cavalry. A small squad was sent to Habaugh Valley. He reports that from undoubted information received from persons in that quarter, including army officers, the rebel force separated yesterday at or near Emmetsburgh, Md., into two divisions, one part, composing 500, were successful in crossing the Potomac at Nolan's Ferry, eleven miles below Point of Rocks. The other encamped quietly in Habaugh Valley, where they remained, as before stated, until this morning. They broke camp and retreated toward Greencastle about 10 o'clock A. M., in which vicinity, it is believed by intelligent army officers, they are now enjoying their otium cum dignitate.

The three companies of RUSH's Pennsylvania Lancers, with their red flags, left the town of Gettysburgh at 9 o'clock this (Sunday) morning, and arrived in Habaugh Valley in season to occupy the encampment which had been vacated by the rebel cavalry an hour previous. At last accounts they were still there.

DRIVING IN THE PICKETS.

Last night a squad of the Third United States Regular Cavalry were doing duty as scouts from Carlisle, and had cautiously felt their way to within about nine miles of Gettysburgh, where at night they encamped, throwing out pickets. The excited people on the road had reported the town in possession of a rebel force of 1,500. Meantime RUSH's Lancers, who were also picketing on the road to Carlisle, got sight of the Union pickets, and took chase after them. Both parties having fleet horses, the chase was exciting, and continued for several miles. The Lancers returned and reported that they had seen the enemy and "driven him in." The U. S. Cavalry scouts sent off post haste to Capt. HASTINGS, commanding at Carlisle, and reported that the enemy "had driven in their pickets," and were occupying Gettysburgh in strong force. The regulars learned their mistake about 10 o'clock this morning, but I do not know whether the Lancers are not still looking for the rebels by the way of Carlisle. When I came away at 10½ o'clock, a battery was being planted so as to command the Gettysburgh Road. When Gettysburgh was reached, the rebels were not within twenty miles of the place.

To still further illustrate the loose way of doing business, one of the regiments which arrived here to-day was detailed for picket duty, and were posted outside the town toward Fairfield. About 9 o'clock a squad of the Home Guard which had been out on duty came galloping toward the town, through the rain and darkness, tired and anxious for their suppers. When half a mile from town, suddenly "Halt!" cried some one, and the same voice inquired, "Who are you?" "We are Federals," said the halted party. At this the person in command, instead of ordering the party to advance, advanced himself, and informed them that they came near being shot. "How is that?" they asked. "We were ordered to fire on any body of cavalry we saw coming into town," said the guard. And yet it was perfectly well known that this and another body of cavalry were out on duty.

Later this evening I learn that the renegade WILDE was made a prisoner in the afternoon at Habaugh's Valley, where he tarried too long on business.

DISTRESS AMONG THE SMALL FARMERS.

This whole country has been swept and plundered. Among those who will feel their losses most keenly are the class of small farmers, whose whole property, in some cases, consisted in their horses. One poor man lost two fine stallions and a brood mare, which were nearly his whole dependence. A person who was at Cashtown when the vandals came in yesterday, says they rode four abreast, and were two hours passing a given point. This would give their number about four thousand. Order reigns. E. S.

A Sad Accident.

EXPLOSION OF A JAMES PROJECTILE—ONE MAN KILLED AND SEVERAL WOUNDED.

SAG HARBOR, L. I., Thursday, Oct. 16.

A sad accident occurred here to-day, during a trial of the James "projectile," in presence of some French and Russian officers of artillery and a considerable concourse of citizens.

Owing to an accident, or from carelessness, a shell exploded, killing HENRY BEVERLAN, of this village and seriously injuring Mr. C. T. JAMES, H. P. BYRAM, Capt. JAMES SMITH and CREAS BERGER, a French officer.

Several others were also more or less wounded.

The sufferers have the very best care and attention that the village can afford.

NEWS FROM NEW-ORLEANS.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMSHIP POTOMAC.

Another Encounter with Guerrillas on the Mississippi.

General Butler on a Visit to Pensacola.

Upwards of Thirty Thousand Destitute Persons Aided in One Week.

The steamship Potomac, from New-Orleans on the 7th inst., with mails, merchandise and passengers, arrived at this port last evening. She has experienced strong northerly winds since leaving Hatteras.

The steamship Roanoke arrived at the river, Oct. 6, but having touched at Havana, was quarantined for a few days.

Oct. 14, 11 A. M., 20 miles north of Hatteras, exchanged signals with a bark, showing a white signal, with a black circle in it, and a letter in the centre, bound North.

On the 5th of October, the gunboats in the neighborhood of Donaldsonville having captured 1,500 head of cattle, convoyed transports up the river to bring them down. They had succeeded in getting the cattle on board, and were on their way down, when arriving at a point a few miles below Donaldsonville, a rebel battery concealed behind the levee, opened upon them. The gunboats immediately stopped and returned the fire, and drove the rebels away, but not until the Sciota had lost her First Lieutenant, (killed,) and had several wounded. The river being so low at this point, and the levee so high, will account for the inability of the gunboats to see the battery on their way up. The body of Lieut. SWASEY, of the Sciota, was brought to this City by the Potomac.

She brings $125,000 in specie.

The United States mail steamship Saxon, Capt. CLAPP, left New-Orleans for New-York, vid Havana on the 4th, with a large freight, the United States mails, and the following passengers for New-York: Mrs. G. W. Clapp, Mrs. Newkirk, C. L. Barjac, Chas. Carrucheau, Van Nuchen, and 27 in the steerage.

JACOB BARKER has announced his retirement from the editorial control of the National Advocate.

OUR NEW-ORLEANS CORRESPONDENCE.

The New Mayor—Gen. Weitzel's Brigade—An Affair with the Guerrillas—Death of Lieut. Swasey—Feeding the Poor—The Enemies of the United States, &c.

NEW-ORLEANS, Tuesday, Oct. 7, 1862.

We are all prepared to be pleased with our new Mayor, Col. H. C. DEMING. I tell you candidly, that after Gens. SHEPLEY and WEITZEL, I had serious misgivings as to whether their places could be filled, for they were both satisfactory to all, and were universally esteemed. I doubt not that Col. DEMING is destined to also win an enviable reputation in his administration as Chief Magistrate of this city. He has the advantage of a fine personal presence, (a thing that goes a great way here,) and a number of years experience in municipal matters acquired as Mayor of the City of Hartford. Already Mayor DEMING begins to talk about the shell road, the draining machines, the levee, the batture, and other institutions peculiar to the Crescent City. I should, perhaps, mention in this connection, that the duties of the city officers are at present no sinecures. The whole Government of the city has been deranged by the rebellion, the treasury has been robbed, the taxpayers impoverished—in fact, all possible embarrassments have been thrown in the way of the present rulers; but a strict attention to business, studied economy, and a determination to succeed, will carry matters triumphantly through.

Brig.-Gen. WEITZEL has left the City Hall and the gay room of the Mayor, and taken up his quarters in the camp, as he is now with his brigade on the northern lines of the city. His command consists of the Twelfth and Thirteenth Connecticut, the Seventy-fifth New-York, Seventh Vermont, and First Louisiana, with THOMPSON's and CARRUTH's Batteries, and five companies of cavalry. It is decidedly one of the finest brigades in the service and has work cut out for it, of which you will hear in due season. Brig.-Gen. ARNOLD, familiar to the nation for his services at Pensacola, is now next in command here to Gen. BUTLER. Gen. SHERMAN, of Port Royal fame, has taken Gen PHELPS' place at Carrolton As the whole army Gen. BUTLER commands is now in a most promising condition, we feel, in fact, trimmed up, spurred, and in fighting order, and we have entire confidence in our Commander, simply because his actions, up to date, show that he has never made a mistake, has never taken a step backward, and, his inadequate means considered, has accomplished an amount of practical benefit for his country not surpassed by any other General in the field.

I have, perhaps, neglected to mention that since our troops were withdrawn from Baton Rouge, our gunboats have been most usefully employed in convoying our steam-packets up and down the river, and keeping the guerrillas away from the shore. On Wednesday last, about fifteen miles above Donaldsonville, the levee was noticed for miles to be covered with cattle. It was evident from their drivers that they were just in from Texas viâ the Opelousas Railroad, and that they were endeavoring to gain some point where they could be got across the river to Camp Moore, or in other words, to JEFF. THOMPSON's forces. The result was the whole drove, sixteen hundred strong, were stopped by Capt. LOWRY, of the gunboat Sciota No. 1, and held for the United States Government. Meantime, the few steamers left us from the great conflagration were pressed into service, and a fleet of six boats were landed opposite the cattle, and fourteen hundred head were secured, only two hundred escaping, though the whole were literally wild cattle. This accomplished, the fleet started down the river, convoyed by the gunboats Sciota No. 1, Kineo No. 3, Itaska No. 7, Katahdin No. 8. Things went on very quietly until the fleet reached a point nearly opposite Donaldsonville, when a force of at least two thousand guerrillas suddenly sprang from behind the levee and fired upon the boats, at the same time opening with four pieces of artillery. On the first discharge one man was killed on gunboat No. 3, two on board of the packet steamer St. Maurice, and the packet steamer Gen. Williams was disabled by a ball in her machinery.

The gunboat Sciota, at the moment of the attack, was in the lead, and nearest the shore, and, most melancholy to relate, Lieut. CHARLES H. SWAYSEY, of the U. S. Navy, who was standing on the wheel-house, was instantly killed. This catastrophe has spread a gloom over our fleet and among the army officers ashore. The attack was dastardly, and for an officer of the presence and accomplishments of Lieut. SWAYSEY to be thus sacrificed, has caused a bitter feeling that will be hard to allay. It will be remembered that the gallant and SWAYSEY was the First-Lieutenant on board of the United States gunboat Varuna, Capt. BOGGS, which fought so valiantly at the taking of Fort Jackson. In that fight, after the united fire of the rebel fleet had killed or driven our men from their guns, Lieut. SWAYSEY, assisted by Capt. BOGGS, assisted in firing them, and continued this conduct, worthy of HULL and DECATUR, until the Varuna was sunk. There is something heart-sickening in recording the death of this officer. If he had fallen in a fair field, in hot blood, while performing his duty, we would weep, and yet be comforted with the fact that he gave up his life gloriously struggling with a brave foe, but to be assassinated, we can hardly reconcile ourselves to the fact that he is really dead. Lieut. SWAYSEY was a native of Taunton, Mass., and was unquestionably one of the most promising officers in the navy, and his death, from the sullen growls I hear about headquarters, may make the rebel VAN DORN's proclamation literal, that there shall be no inhabitants living within seven miles of the river bank.

On Wednesday morning next, Oct. 8th, the paroled rebel soldiers in this city, who enter their names in the proper book to be exchanged as prisoners of war, will be sent to Baton Rouge or some other point on the river, there to be turned over to the rebel authorities. I have conversed with several of these men, and they are a little disgusted at the result of what I deem in many cases was a bit of bragadocia, for there were but two hundred and forty odd who reported for exchange out of the many thousand rebel soldiers who are now in citizens' dress walking about the streets of this city, and in a large number of cases getting their living from the Government authorities; for you will observe that in the last official publication of provisions distributed by the United State authorities, there were nine hundred families of acknowledged Confederate soldiers receiving relief. The résumé may not be uninteresting as giving a glance at the internal life of New-Orleans. This enormous charity, this unheard of thing of a Government conquering a city and then feeding the people, finds no parallel in history. We have distributed the following provisions:

Pork	221 bbls.	44,200 lbs.
Beef	92 bbls.	18,400 lbs.
Bacon	41 tcs.	12,810 lbs.
Split Peas	79 bbls.	13,925 lbs.
Hard Bread	17 bbls.	1,526 lbs.
Loaves of Bread		77,049 lbs.
Total		168,010 lbs.
The number of families receiving aid is		9,046
Families of Federal soldiers	917	9,046
Destitute	7,196
Families of Confederate soldiers	960
Number of persons		30,420
Total No. of families who have received aid		9,857

The printed blanks furnished by the United States authorities, to be filled up by our citizens and returned to the Provost Marshal, have been taken advantage of by individuals to get off a little wit and a great deal of ill-nature. One woman, under the heading of "Sex," put down "she adder;" another, under the head of "Occupation," entered "grass widow;" another, in better taste, wrote, "mother of a family." A Mr. PATTERSON, it seems, was more than usually desirous of giving information, for he departed from the strict necessity of the case, to give utterance to various opinions and comments, all of which had a most unhappy result, as will be seen by the following official document:

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF, NEW-ORLEANS, Oct. 6, 1862.

The Major-General commanding the Department, orders that URIAH G. PATTERSON be confined for six months at Fort Pickens, at hard labor, with a twenty-four-pound ball attached to his leg by a chain, for an insulting and seditious report to the authorities of the United States. By order of Major-Gen. BUTLER.

FRED. MARLIN, Lieut. and A. D. C.

COPY OF REPORT RETURNED.

URIAH G. PATTERSON, aged 48 years.

Residence—No. 441 South Poydras-street, First District.

Occupation—Police-officer, before subjugation of New-Orleans; since, a non-capacitated prisoner of war, confined within the Military District of New-Orleans.

Registered Alien—Registered. Born free.

Taken Oath of Allegiance—To support the Constitution of the United States as revised, amended, adopted and defended by the Confederate States.

Registered Enemy—Of the Constitution as interpreted and executed by the present Abolition Government of the D I S-United States, but a friend of the Constitution and Union as interpreted by the immortal, pure HENRY CLAY.

Neglected to take Oath or Register—Neglected to take oath.

We are promised in a few days a printed list of the registered "enemies of the United States." The number is quite large, and it will be interesting to know from what particular kind of people this crop of defunct traitors are gathered. If all this disgusting treason means anything, it is this, that the leniency of the National Government is misconstrued, for these infatuated people are as ignorant of the responsibility they have assumed by their conduct, as they are of a sentiment of genuine patriotism.

Yesterday morning was attended the funeral of Capt. T. A. CROWLEY, Thirtieth Massachusetts Volunteers. The Captain was apparently perfectly well twenty-four hours previous to his death, when he was suddenly attacked by what is here termed a congestive chill, from the effects of which he never recovered. He was an officer of, fine abilities, devoted to his profession, and had proverbially one of the best drilled and best cared-for companies in his regiment. His remains were taken to St. Patrick's Church, when every honor was paid to his memory and virtues that could be by the priests, in the performance of their imposing religious service. I mention the circumstance as a marked contrast to the brutal conduct of Rev. Mr. LEACOCK, (Episcopal,) of Christ's Church, who refused to perform the burial service over the remains of the lamented DE KAY, and only under compulsion would assist at the last honors paid the brave Gen. WILLIAMS, who fell at Baton Rouge.

Maj.-Gen. BUTLER left yesterday on the steamer McLellan for Pensacola, where he will, I understand, make a short sojourn.

Before the arrival of our forces here, murders averaged about three a week, and as many as six have been perpetrated in as many days. Under Gen. BUTLER, the crime of murder has become so uncommon that the Press of the City, just at this time, are using all their energies to work a very disgusting affair of the kind, the novelty of the incident seeming to make the reporters quite crazy with excitement. The time was not long since in this city, when a murder was either entirely overlooked, or dismissed with a line.

A lot of damaged cotton, which had for a long time been under water, was yesterday sold on the levee for 33 cents per pound; more than half of the lot was worthless. A lot of 250 bales arrived here yesterday "from over the lakes." It is understood that the staple was permitted to leave Secessia because its value was to be exchanged for provisions.

New-Orleans Money Market.

NATIONAL ADVOCATE OFFICE, No. 70 Camp-street, Monday evening, Oct. 6, 1862.

The week opens very quietly, even under a general suspension of business. There was some little inquiry for Northern exchange to remit by the steamer leaving to-morrow morning. Some parties appear anxious to send their funds thither. The sales of recent importations of provisions, &c., also have to be remitted, and some debtors to the North are desirous of paying up, even at the great difference in exchange. The debtors to the North, as a mass, cannot at this juncture meet the wishes of their creditors. It is impossible to make collections or realize anything from debts and assets in the interior. It is also impossible to realize on real estate. Creditors at the North will consider that our merchants, their debtors, do not repudiate their debts and obligations; far from it, they universally admit claims against them, and are willing to transfer their assets in liquidation. A merchant may have to-day due him from the country $100,000 or $200,000, and all heretofore considered and deemed first-class assets, and yet he might not have sufficient money in his pocket to go to market to-morrow morning, or to pay his baker for half a dozen loaves of bread. This is no fancy or imaginary view of the present state of affairs in our city. The value of sales of produce, the changing and interchanging of commodities, have amounted to three hundred millions of dollars per annum.

In and about the banks it was very quiet to-day; not a ripple was to be observed. Renewals of maturing obligations were carried through. It is manifest and has been for months and months past, that a large majority of debtors could not pay up, and the banks have renewed and been accommodating in the extreme. We are not aware of any exception.

The exchange market, as before alluded to, was rather better supplied to-day. One of the old banks was a willing seller at 151 for sterling sixty days sight, 370 for France and 10 @ par premium, or 110 for sight checks on a branch of the Atlantic States, receiving in payment Southern notes. Out of door transactions were at 1 @ 1½ New-York sight direct at 115@116. Very little in gold and silver, and retail inquiry for Treasury Notes, closes our daily review of the general financial market.

THE ARMY OF VIRGINIA.

Indications of Immediate Hostilities.

Stuart's Rebel Cavalry Between Bull Run Mountain and the Blue Ridge.

The Rebels at Bristow Station and Warrenton.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Oct. 16, 1862.

We have dispatches from the TIMES special correspondents in front of Washington, dated at Centreville and Green Springs, to the following effect:

The rebel Gen. STUART was certainly at Leesburgh on Monday, our correspondent having been within sight of his camp fires. He attempted to cut off Capt. AYRES' detachment, but was foiled by information given by a negro, who had heard his master detail the rebel plan of operations.

There is no doubt that STUART is now immediately in front of our advanced guard, and threatening an attack. Gen. STAHL has advanced to meet him, and our correspondent is confident that STUART will be compelled to-night or to-morrow to fight or run.

STUART was encamped yesterday between Bull Run Mountain and the Blue Ridge. Our pickets were driven in last night from the direction of Leesburgh.

Lieut. KRONING returned on Tuesday evening from a reconnoissance, and reports a force of 400 rebel cavalry at Breston Station, and that the rebels are running trains between Warrenton and Warrenton Junction.

A small rebel force appeared yesterday on the Stone Bridge at the Bull Run battle-ground.

THE VICTORY IN TENNESSEE.

The Rebels under Anderson Defeated at Lavergne—Large Haul of Prisoners, Arms, &c.

Correspondence of the Cincinnati Commercial.

LOUISVILLE, Tuesday, Oct. 14.

Some gentlemen reached here from Nashville yesterday. To one of them I am indebted for copies of the Nashville Union, which contain full accounts of the breaking up of the rebel camp of Gen. ANDERSON, at Lavergne.

Gen. NEGLEY ordered Gen. PALMER to move with his command, and instructed Col. MILLER to cooperate in the movement. The whole force moved promptly at 9 o'clock on the night of Monday 6th, consisting of the Twenty-first Illinois, Col. MILLER; first section of the First Kentucky Battery, Lieut. NELL; part of the Seventh Pennsylvania Cavalry, Capt. MAY; two sections of Capt. HOTALING's Illinois Battery, Col. STOKES; First Middle Tennessee Cavalry. PALMER's force keeping straight on the Murfreesboro' Road, while MILLER commanded four regiments of infantry, took a direction left of the railroad. PALMER arrived at Lavergne at 3½ o'clock on Tuesday morning. MILLER did not arrive in front of the enemy until the battle had begun, which was at daylight. Before the encounter, PALMER took prisoners some men who were on picket duty at Lavergne, and sent them to Nashville.

The enemy, under Gen. S. R. ANDERSON, opened upon PALMER, and attempted to flank him by throwing the Thirty-second Alabama on his right. The enemy with one gun opened upon us, but HOTALING's Battery, a short distance off, returned fire from sections. The second shell from our artillery went through the enemy's powder magazine, which immediately blew up, causing complete destruction of the whole work and everything within respectable distance around it. About this time the Alabama regiment, above referred to, made a hostile demonstration upon PALMER's flank, but MILLER's force, consisting of the Eighteenth Ohio, Lieut.-Col. GIVEN, Twentieth, Lieut.-Col. NEMLING, Seventy-eighth Pennsylvania, Col. SEWELL, Fourteenth Michigan, Col. ST. CLAIR, arrived through a corn-field, and rattled away, throwing his force across the front and on the Murfreesboro road on the right. The Seventy-eighth Pennsylvania halted in front of the retreating enemy, when he attempted to pass his line to our left.

SEWELL threw his regiment rapidly by the left flank, completely in front of the enemy. During all this time the artillery was playing upon them with telling effect. The cavalry dashed against the line of the Seventy-eighth, but was met by a succession of volleys of musketry. The Thirty-second Alabama quickly threw down their arms, and the cavalry elevated a white flag, but the Captain of the artillery, not seeing it, kept firing.

The cavalry then fled in great confusion into the woods. Meantime the Eighteenth Ohio had arrived at the place where the enemy's artillery made the first stand, and by order of MILLER deployed as skirmishers to sweep the woods recently occupied by the Alabama regiment. The men swept the woods clear back by the camp, and took numerous prisoners, among them Col. MAURY. MILLER, learning PALMER's infantry had gone in the same direction, withdrew the Eighteenth Ohio.

Firing in corn-fields in front of the battery had, by this time, become scattering and irregular, and soon ceased. The Fourteenth Michigan and Twenty-first Ohio had each taken an active part, and secured many prisoners. NEGLEY, at an early hour on Tuesday morning, deeming it expedient to risk no sacrifice of troops, sent reinforcements from Nashville, consisting of the Twenty-second Illinois, Tenth and Eleventh Michigan, and a battery. NEGLEY taking immediate command.

Reinforcements proceeded to within a mile of the Insane Asylum, when met by STOKES and his regiment. The first remark the Colonel made to the General was, "General, we've got 'em." "Well," said the General, "what have you got?" "By George," ejaculated STOKES, "we've got everything—two Colonels, several other commissioned officers, and nearly three hundred men; all small arms, guns, flour, bacon, and all the necessaries we could carry after filling our own and all the enemy's wagons, and every species of cart we could press."

The rebels had but one gun, which was captured. We also took from the enemy four hundred small arms, a regimental color, fifty-six loads of flour, several hundred weight of bacon, forty beeves, and a number of horses. Our loss, as far as ascertained, four killed and seven wounded. The rebel loss, killed, thirty; eighty wounded; number of prisoners, over three hundred; two Colonels, several Captains and Lieutenants, Ordnance officers, and a squad of Sergeants and Corporals. Many of the prisoners state that they were sick of the war and quite willing to quit fighting and return home.

The rebel forces were under the command of Gen. SAMUEL ANDERSON, and that individual informed his men that reinforcements were necessary, and started toward Murfreesboro for them, and has not been heard of since. The cavalry were respectively under JOHN T. MORGAN, BIFFLE, and MCKINSTRY.

Among the officers captured are Lieut.-Col. A. R. Langford, Thirty-eighth Alabama; Capt. W. Thompson, Sergeants S. C. Gallier, S. S. Parker, J. Diggers, Sergeants S. C. Gallier, S. S. Parker, Third Alabama; T. J. N. Daniels, and A. Duffin, Third Alabama; T. Deestrick, First-Lieut. Baffle's Cavalry; Corporals J. H. Livingston, F. Blaunt, and Sergeant Thomas Flincher, Thirty-second Alabama. Col. Harry Maury, Thirty-second Alabama, Mobile, was sick in camp during the fight, and unable to take part. He was brought to Nashville by Palmer, in an ambulance.

THE BATTLE OF THE HATCHIE.

Brilliant Bravery of the National Troops.

Correspondence of the Chicago Times.

BOLIVAR, TENN., Tuesday Oct. 7, 1862.

Before describing the Battle of the Hatchie, let me give your readers a statement of the rebel forces which first attacked Corinth, and then were attacked on the Hatchie. It is a statement which comes through sources and circumstances which render it entirely reliable. I may mention, hereafter, in sending you the full personnel of the rebel army. Two army corps, under the command of VAN DORN and PRICE, composed this force. Each corps was composed of two divisions. One division in each corps was composed of four brigades each, and the other of three brigades each, making, in all fourteen brigades. Each brigade was composed of four regiments, in all fifty-six regiments of infantry. Three thousand cavalry also formed a part of the army. Their artillery did not bear its usual proportion to the rest of the army, it being difficult of transportation over the country they had to traverse, and, in their proposed attack upon Corinth, they chose to rely upon the impetuosity of infantry charges. The force of the rebels cannot be figured below 30,000, and the lowest claim I have heard made by any of the rebel prisoners was 38,000.

Late on Friday afternoon, Oct. 3, Gen. HURLBUT received orders to telegraph for Gen. GRANT to march his division towards Corinth, to aid Gen. ROSECRANS in his defence of that place, or to aid in cutting off the retreat of the enemy, should he be beaten back from the attack he was then making on that point. By 3 o'clock, on Saturday morning, the division was on the march.

The division was under the command of Brig.-Gen. HURLBUT, and the active members of his Staff on this occasion were Maj. C. C. Campbell, Chief of Artillery; Capt. Wm. Jackson, Chief Commissary of Subsistence; D. J. G. Keenan, Medical Director; Lieut. M. R. Cook, Aid-de-Camp. Brig.-Gen. J. G. Lauman commanded the First Brigade, which was composed of the following regiments and batteries: Third Iowa, Capt. Trumbull, acting Colonel; Twenty-eighth Illinois, Col. A. R. Johnson; Fifty-third Illinois, Capt. John W. McClanahan, Acting Colonel; Thirty-second Illinois, Col. John Logan; Forty-first Illinois, Col. J. F. Pugh; Company F, First Missouri Battery, Lieut. Brotzman commanding, four guns; Fifteenth Ohio Battery, Lieut. Burrows commanding. The Second Brigade was under the command of Brig.-Gen. J. C. Veatch. Capt. Frank W. Fox, A. A. G., Capt. Walker, Lieut. White and Lieut. Hewitt formed his staff. The brigade was composed of the following regiments and batteries; Fourteenth Illinois, Col. Cyrus Wall; Fifteenth Illinois, Lieut. Col. G. C. Rogers commanding; Forty-sixth Illinois, Col. John A. Davis; Twenty-fifth Indiana, Col. W. H. Morgan; Fifty-third Indiana, Lieut. Col. Wm. Jones commanding; Bolton's Chicago Battery, and Burnap's Seventh Ohio Battery, each of four guns. The Twelfth Michigan, Lieut.-Col. Graves commanding, and the Sixty-eighth Ohio, Col. Scott, were added to this brigade, from that of Gen. Ross' for this special expedition. The cavalry force consisted of two battalions of the Fifth Ohio Cavalry, Maj. Haze commanding, Maj. Shearer second in command.

Saturday was an excessively hot day, but, notwithstanding this, the little army had marched by the road twenty-six miles, through the dust and heat, and they encamped five miles from the Hatchie River, on what is called the State line road. During the last half of this march the cavalry was incessantly engaged with that of the rebels, and did gallant service in clearing the way.

The presence of the enemy in force being ascertained, our troops bivouacked in line of battle. By the order of marching in advance on alternate days, it fell to the lot of the Second Brigade to lead on the then eventful morrow, the First Brigade being held as the reserve.

The country in the vicinity of the river is very broken,—short, steep hills, and the valleys filled with a thick underbrush of timber. Our army was faced directly east on the line which divides the State of Mississippi, and approaching the Hatchie River, which, at the point of crossing, runs nearly from the south to the north.

The enemy had not only strongly posted himself on the opposite side of the river on Saturday evening, but had thrown a considerable infantry force across the river and a battery of artillery of four guns, and planted it immediately in front of the bridge.

Early in the morning our army began to move, shelling the heights with the artillery, the Fourteenth Illinois and Twenty-eighth Indiana acting as skirmishers, and, together, driving the enemy's cavalry and skirmishers from every position.

Soon after the march commenced, Maj.-Gen. ORD arrived on the field and took the chief command, though he made no change in the disposition of the troops or the plan of the engagement.

The first important contest was opened about 9 o'clock, for the possession of the hill whose slopes and the bottom beyond stretched three-quarters of a mile to the bridge across the river. The enemy had planted a battery of four 12-pound howitzers immediately in front of the bridge, to protect the advance of their infantry, which had already been massed in the timber on both sides of the wood. During the fire of this artillery upon the hill, our line of battle was advancing up the opposite side, preceded by the artillery. Bolton's Battery was quickly planted in position on the hill, which was no sooner perceived by the enemy than they started a column of infantry on their left, facing our right, to flank it, which movement was checked by throwing out BURNAP's Battery to the right of BOLTON's Battery some distance, which opened upon the advancing column of rebel infantry a most destructive fire of grape and canister, which, with the aid of some sharp practice of our infantry, sent the whole mass helter-skelter back through the timber, across an open field, and into the woods beyond, so far that they were never seen afterwards. Immediately after, both batteries were brought to bear upon that of the rebels in front of the bridge, and, after a sharp contest, were enabled to silence it.

The first line of battle had been formed by the Second Brigade, the First being held as a reserve. Gen. VEATCH led on his line in gallant style. His right was speedily engaged by fresh troops, which the enemy had thrown across the bridge and deployed to their left, but with little effect in stopping the onward march of our troops. The left wing of our column, with Capt. Fox in its lead, were feeling their way through a point of timber and over a deep gully, and endeavoring to draw the fire of the rebels posted to the right of their battery. This they did not succeed in doing, until they reached an open space, when the fire of the rebels told plainly where they were, and that in numbers not to be despised. The infantry engagement which followed was sharp, short and decisive. In twenty minutes from the time the rebels opened their fire, 400 of them threw down their arms and surrendered, while hundreds of others escaped, some by throwing themselves into the river and reaching the opposite bank; a few made good their retreat across the bridge; others broke for the right and left, some throwing away their arms in their flight. The rebel battery was then drawn to our rear. During this march down the hill, Col. DAVIS, of the Forty-sixth Illinois, was severely wounded while gallantly leading his regiment, and the command devolved upon Lieut. Col. J. J. JONES. During this time the rebels opened another battery on an eminence a quarter of a mile in rear of the bridge, and commanding it, and were throwing a galling fire from it, as well as from their infantry, which lined every available point on that side of the river. At this time Gen. HURLBUT was just bringing up the reserve brigade, or all of it but two companies which proves the desperate character of the engagement. All of the artillery was also being hastened forward. "Pretty warm work," says Gen. ORD to Gen. HURLBUT. "Not very," was the cool reply. "That battery," pointing to the one across the bridge, "must be silenced," said the commander. "It shall be in twenty minutes," was the reply. Some doubt being raised as to the proper point of placing a section of BOLTON'S Battery, "Show me the place," said Senior Lieut. J. N. MOORE, "and I will plant it there, if it is in —." Such was the spirited determination of the whole army. Gen. ORD had just ordered the Fifty-third Indiana to cross the bridge, and they were doing so under a most terrific fire from the battery and from the infantry on the hill, when Gen. ORD received a shot in the leg, just above the ankle-joint, the ball fortunately passing between the bones of the leg, but necessarily disabling him from further immediate duty. This was not far from 10 o'clock. Gen. ORD had been very active and devoted in conducting the battle. As well as everything had prospered so far, yet the troops were entirely unacquainted with their new commander. However brave and skillful he might be, they did not know him. HURLBUT they did know and believed in him, that was sure. He had planned this engagement, and undoubtedly the troops thought they could execute it better, and with more confidence, under the man they knew and trusted, than any other. It was natural.

The Fifty-third Indiana was struggling against a storm of lead and iron, which swept the entire length and breadth of the bridge. The Twenty-fifth Indiana, the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Illinois sprang in to share the danger, and all pushed through the storm, the Indiana troops crowding to the right along the narrow space between the road and the river, which made a short bend just above the bridge; the Illinois troops deploying to the left. Col. MORGAN, of the Twenty-fifth Indiana, I believe, was the first to cross the bridge. The Twelfth Michigan, the Sixty-eighth Ohio, and the Forty-sixth Illinois immediately followed, and all the artillery was close in their rear, and opened fire as soon as it was fairly across, while Gen. LAUMAN's brigade was hurrying up the steps to join in the desperate affray that closed up the victory of the day. The most of these troops, deploying to the left, drove the rebel infantry from every position they attempted to maintain, and Col. HALL and Lieut.-Col. ROGERS led their regiments up the hill to flank the rebel battery. Gen. VEACH here received a stroke on the head of his scabbard from a passing round shot, which for a time completely paralyzed him. The rebel battery, perceiving the loss of its infantry support, and the imminent danger it was in from our advancing columns, was rapidly hauled off to another eminence, some distance to the northwest of its old position, when the hill in front of the bridge was immediately occupied by the First Missouri and BURNAP's batteries. BOLTON's battery was planted on another eminence to the left, and the Fifteenth Ohio still further to the left. Another rebel battery opening upon the Fifteenth Ohio, BURNAP's was ordered to its assistance, and in these positions our artillery at 4 o'clock could find no reply to their discharges, nor discover the retreating forms of our enemy.

The weary troops camped on the ground of their victory. The cavalry followed up the retreating rebels, who, in small squads, made their way to Cram's Mill[illegible] where they effected a cr[illegible] ward all night.

In the m[illegible]r [illegible] gathered up the fruits of their victory, [illegible] rifled howitzers, five thousand stand of arms, five hundred small arms, a few horses and mules. Between four and five hundred prisoners were sent to Bolivar, where they are yet retained. After scouring the country in every direction for two days, the army returned to Bolivar.

It is needless for me to add one word of praise, either of particular officers or of the men. They all did their duty. The infantry and artillery were worked together in admirable harmony, and confidently relied upon each other to perform their particular duties in the battle. And, in my judgment, the best criterion of officers' abilities is the opinion of the men who fight under them; and that Gen. HURLBERT, and Major CAMPBELL and Capt. JACKSON, of his staff; Gen. VEACH, and Capt. FOX, of his staff; and Gen. LAUMAN, and the commanding officers of the various regiments, have the unbounded confidence of the soldiers in their ability and discretion, there is no doubt. This division is willing to trust itself wherever Gen. HURLBERT tells it to go.

The enemy, scattered and broken as he has been in his attack upon Corinth, and in being attacked at Hatchie River, had undoubtedly made the best of his way to Holly Springs, where the rebel prisoners report PILLOW in command of about six thousand men, most of whom are the lately exchanged prisoners.

Gen. Ross started with his division South last night, and we already learn that he occupies Grand Junction, and that a rebel force is threatening an attack, but probably not very seriously.

From the West Indies.

DEMERARA ASKING FOR CAPTURED CONTRABANDS.

The authorities of Demerara, it seems, are moving to secure the colonization there of negroes who may be captured by our vessels of war on board slavers. The Demerara Gazette of a late date says:

"His Excellency the Governor, who has entered heartily into the scheme, invited members of the Court of Policy and of the Financial Colleges to meet him on the 18th inst. at the Public Buildings, and the result of the consultation was that, as Denmark had already stirred in the matter, and Jamaica was preparing to move, prompt action was necessary; and his Excellency suggested that Hon. WILLIAM WALKER, the Government Secretary, should go to Washington as a delegate from this colony to treat with the Federal Government for the emigration to this colony of the liberated slaves, should the plan of emancipation, as proposed, be carried into effect. Mr. WALKER, who, during his long connection with the Colony as Governor and Government Secretary, has always exerted his best energies to promote its interests and welfare, has consented to sacrifice personal convenience and comfort to promote a public good, and will leave in the packet to-day on his mission to Washington. From the position he holds here, his intelligence and his thorough acquaintance with all matters connected with the colony, Mr. WALKER is admirably qualified to conduct with success the negotiations intrusted to him, and the selection of so able an agent has been universally and warmly approved by the public.

The public meeting, as convened by the Mayor, was held at the time appointed, and the proceedings will be found reported in another part of our paper. The Colony is much indebted to Mr. EDWARDS, the American Consul, for the valuable information he has afforded, and the handsome manner in which he has come forward with an offer of his services in promoting the emigration to this Colony of the liberated slaves. From the statement made by him, and as we learn also from a Dutch paper, the Danish Ambassador at Washington has proposed, on behalf of his Government, to enter into an agreement with the Federal Government, for the removal of some of the liberated slaves to Santa Cruz and elsewhere, on precisely the same terms as this Colony is about to propose, namely, a three years' indenture, at the same rate of wages as paid to other laborers, and with the same rights as are enjoyed by the other inhabitants. Denmark is, therefore, before us, but the supply which she will require will be so limited as not to interfere materially with our prospects.

One part of Mr. WALKER's mission will be to see if the Federal Government will let us have captured Africans on the same terms as those on which we can obtain them from our own Government. As these people will be a burden of which the United States Government will be glad to get rid, we may succeed in obtaining from this source an additional supply of labor.

The plan of introducing liberated slaves from the States will, if carried out, prove a great blessing to the Colony. The sugar estates will have labor of the best quality, and at a much lower rate than at present, and we may hope to see many a property which is at present abandoned, white with the cotton for the want of which so many thousands of English operatives are now starving. In time, too, we may expect to see these people cultivating various products of the country for sale in the Colony for exportation. As they are also accustomed to more comforts than our other laborers, to supply their wants will require a greater amount of industry, and trade generally will improve. In short, this kind of immigration holds out so great and so many advantages, that every one must ardently wish success to Mr. WALKER in his mission. It is understood that if Mr. WALKER should succeed, he will lose no time in countermanding the orders already sent for the shipment of people to this Colony from India and China during the next immigration season."

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

THE HOMICIDE OF PETER C. REAL

TRIAL OF MRS. MARY REAL.

Court of Oyer and Terminer.

Before Justice Barnard.

SEVENTH AND LAST DAY.

The popular interest in this protracted, but highly interesting trial, has continued unabated from the day of its commencement, and the last day witnessed no diminution in the throng of eager spectators who sought admission to the court-room. As on previous days, the ladies had first to be accommodated, and their number was so great that little room was left within the bar for male auditors, even though they urged their prior claims as members of the profession. It is to be hoped that the new Court-house now in process of construction, will contain at least one room capable of accommodating a reasonably large audience. Mr. Hall's address to the jury occupied five hours, and was an exceedingly able, thorough, masterly effort. The charge of Judge BARNARD was brief, concise, and to the point, and was admitted by all to be entirely impartial.

Mr. HALL resumed his address to the jury by analyzing the opening address of Mr. DUNPHY, the junior counsel for the defence, which purported to give the statement of the accused of her first acquaintance with, and subsequent relations to the deceased. He claimed that this statement was not at all substantiated by the testimony, but that the whole tenor of the evidence went to show that she was the pursuer, and he the pursued; that she early formed an attachment for him, which he did not reciprocate, but which she continued to cherish, and for six years followed him with her importunities that he would make her his wife. In reference to the alleged marriage, he argued that it was highly improbable that a young girl and a young man, both educated in the Catholic faith, which holds marriage to be one of the most solemn sacraments of the Church, should have been married by a Protestant clergyman, and that the marriage should also have been kept a secret, there being nothing in the evidence to show any necessity for such secresy. He also claimed that it was highly improbable that any bride should fail to recollect the place where she was married or the name of the clergyman, or that she should part with the marriage certificate under any circumstances. He dissected in detail the entire evidence of the defence, and argued that it not only failed to prove a marriage between the parties, but that her whole course of conduct was inconsistent with the supposition of marriage. Their not living together, her addressing him in letters as Mr. Real, her denial to Mr. Underhill that she knew him, together with numerous other circumstances, all tended to disprove the fact of marriage. From a passage in one of her letters, in which she says, "my God, is my prophecy to be fulfilled?" he drew the conclusion that it referred to a threat of hers that he should never marry any one else; and after learning that he was about to marry a young lady in New-Jersey, and soon after this, meeting him in company with Miss VANNAME, her jealousy was aroused, and she resolved to execute her threat and immediately and deliberately proceeded to carry out her purpose. His letter to Miss VanName, wherein he speaks of the accused being "partially deranged," was merely apologetic for the unpleasant position in which his friend had been placed, and could not be regarded as a deliberate expression of opinion on his part, that the accused was insane. If, however, any importance was to be attached to that letter, he claimed that the whole of it should be taken as equally important and equally true. There were statements in that letter which entirely upset the theory of the prosecution, for it contained a positive denial of the marriage. If she was not married, she had no claims upon Real as a husband, and it could not be argued that her ill-treatment as a wife had deranged her mind.

On the general subject of the insanity of the accused, the District Attorney read numerous extracts from works on medical jurisprudence, to show that the plea of moral insanity was a modern and dangerous innovation, and not to be admitted except upon the clearest evidence. In the case of homicidal insanity, it was of the first importance that a total lack of motive should be shown; any motive, whether it be jealousy, revenge, or what not, would tend to destroy the plea, and place the crime in the category of intentional murder.

Applying the principles laid down in the books to the present case, he asked where was the evidence of insanity on the part of the accused? Was there any evidence of a more morbid state of the mind than usually accompanies disappointed love and jealousy?

He then proceeded to state the theory of the prosecution, which was that the murder was a deliberately arranged and premeditated act, committed from motives of jealousy and revenge, and in execution of previous threats and prophecies of the accused. He rehearsed in detail the acts and movements of the [illegible], from the t[illegible] morning of th[illegible] to the cell o[illegible] station-house, after the perpetration of the deed, and claimed that there was not the slightest evidence in any or all of them to warrant the assumption that she was not perfectly sane in the eye of the law, and capable of appreciating the nature of the crime and its quality of right or wrong.

At the close of Mr. Hall's argument, (it being now 4 o'clock,) the Court inquired of the jury whether they would prefer that the charge should be given then, or that the Court should adjourn till the next morning. After consultation, they replied that they would prefer to go on with the case then, whereupon the Judge proceeded to address the jury substantially as follows:

CHARGE OF JUSTICE BARNARD.

GENTLEMEN OF THE JURY: On the afternoon of Friday, the 13th of June, of the present year, Peter C. Real came to his death by violence—namely, by being shot with a pistol. The Grand Jury, by an instrument under their hands, has charged it on a female, who gave her name as Mary Real. An indictment is a written accusation of one or more persons of a crime upon a charge presented and preferred to a Grand Jury. They have charged that it was done with a felonious design; that is that she intended to effect his death; and that act, when put in execution, was murder. The accused, by her plea of not guilty, has thrown upon the prosecution the onus of substantiating by legal evidence the truth of the allegations contained in the indictment. The prosecution, then, gentlemen, must satisfy you

1. Of the death of Peter C. Real.

2. That he came to his death by violence at the hands of Mary C. Real.

3. That it was done through a premeditated design to effect his death; or, in other words, that she intended to murder him. Unless the prosecution has adduced before you satisfactory evidence of the truth of these propositions, you must acquit the accused.

Our statute denies a murder to be the killing of a human being by a premeditated design, without the authority of law, by poison, shooting, stabbing or any other means or in any other manner, and which is not manslaughter or excusable or justifiable homicide. It is committed in one of these ways. The first one only has any reference to this case. That is, when it is perpetrated from a premeditated design to effect the death of the person killed, or of any human being. To try the truth or falsity of that charge you have been impanneled. The defence has admitted that Real is dead, and that he died from the effects of a pistol-shot wound, fired from a pistol in the hands of the accused. They deny:

1. That it was done with premeditation:

5. That, admitting that it was done by premeditation, still the accused should not be held responsible for her acts because the condition of her mind was such on that day as to render her incapable of distinguishing right from wrong, and not a rational being; in other words, insane.

There are two kinds of insanity—a permanent, total and visible one, discoverable by acts, looks, manner and conversation, and an impulsive one—one that renders a person wholly irresponsible for every act—termed lunacy; and the other insane on particular subjects, and not always visible, unless occasions offer, like pynomania, cliptomania, &c. That has been termed by recent writer's impulsive insanity. A remarkable instance of the latter has recently came under my observation in the case of a celebrated London physician, whose life, although surrounded by every luxury that wealth could produce, could not resist the temptation of stealing every article that was of a portable nature, regardless of its use or value. Her insanity on that subject has been twice established, I think, before a jury.

In homicidal insanity murder is committed without any motive whatever, strictly deserving the name; or at most with one totally inadequate to produce the act in a sane mind. On the other hand murder is never criminally committed without some motive adequate to the purpose in the mind that is actuated by it and with reference to the victim. In the one case the motive may be theft, promotion, ambition, a desire to avoid detection or disgrace, or it may be revenge. With a criminal murder is always a means of accomplishing some selfish object, and is often accompanied with some other crime; whereas, with the homicidal monomaniac, murder is the only object in view, and is never accompanied with any other improper act. The criminal lays plans for the execution of his designs; time, place and weapons are all suited to the purpose. The homicidal monomaniac, on the contrary, as a general rule, consults none of the conveniences of crime; it is usually perpetrated on a sudden, with the dearest objects at hand, in the presence of a multitude, without any effort to escape or any desire to avoid detection. This insanity ought to be shown to have been habitual, or, at least, to have evinced itself in more than a single instance. I can conceive of the case of a human being, of a weakly constituted mind, who might, by long brooding over real or imagined wrongs, work up so perverted a feeling of hatred against an individual that danger might occur. He might not be so deluded to the existence of actual injuries that he had received; but he might grossly exaggerate them, and they might so operate on his mind as to produce crime. But still he would be accountable to human tribunals in a totally different sense. I can conceive of a person who might not be accountable to his Maker, and yet be perfectly accountable to human tribunals. This species of insanity is not generally admitted in legal tribunals as a species of insanity which relieves from responsibility from crime; and it ought never to be admitted as a defence, until it is shown that these propensities exist in such violence as to subjugate the intellect, control the will, and render it impossible for the party to do otherwise than yield. Where its existence is fully established, this species of insanity relieves from accountability to human laws. But this state of mind is not to be presumed without evidence, nor does it usually occur without some premonitory symptoms indicating its approach. Moral insanity is defined to be a distinct and well-known malady, which arbitrarily impels its victim to involuntary crimes, which he detests but cannot avoid. It was said in the case of the People vs. Freeman that the true test was, did he know right from wrong, or did he know that the act was contrary to law. To simplify the matter, you can ask yourself the question whether the accused knew the "act," "how to do it," "and the consequences of it." It is a rule of law, who is sane is presumed to know and intend the necessary consequences of his own illegal act. If, therefore, it is made to appear to your satisfaction by legal evidence, that the accused did it with design, then the presumption would be that she intended to murder him, and the burden of proof is removed from the prosecution to the defence. You have a right to find one of four verdicts under the evidence presented before you, viz.: murder; manslaughter in the third degree, which is the killing of a human being in the heat of passion without desiging to effect death, by a dangerous weapon; and manslaughter in the fourth degree, the killing of a human being by culpable negligence. I deem it proper to state to you that the prosecution have to establish the truth of either of these propositions, and they also must establish to you the fact that this pistol was fired by her with the intention to kill this man. If you have any doubt that she did this with the the intention to kill him, that doubt is her property; and if you have any reasonable doubt in regard to her sanity, that doubt is her property. A doubt must not be a mere possibility, an abstraction, or a far-fetched presumption; but it must be a reasonable and natural result arising from all the evidence that you have heard. It must be such a doubt as would justify you in saying upon your oaths that the case is so equally balanced on the part of the prosecution and of the defence, that in justice to the oath you have taken that you can decide either way, it is your duty to render a verdict of not guilty; or, in other words, if the evidence is of that character you will convict, if not, you will acquit. The testimony offered by the defence on the subject of marriage and intimacy has no bearing upon the main questions of the prosecution.

1. Did she kill?

2. With what intent did she kill?

The testimony offered by the defence on the subject of marriage and intimacy, can only relate to the subject of insanity, and if the jury entertain no reasonable or rational doubt of her mental capacity to discriminate between the right or wrong of the act of killing, then the jury must dismiss from their minds as irrevalant all the testimony so offered on the subject of marriage and intimacy. The sole legal test of insanity as a defence in criminal trials, or as applicable to raise a reasonable and rational doubt of the sanity of an accused is, "Whether or no the party accused was laboring under such a defect of reason from disease of the mind, as not to know the nature or quality of the act he was doing, or, if he did not know it, that he was doing what was wrong." It will be the province of the jury to convict of murder in the first degree.

First. If the jury are of opinion, beyond a reasonable and rational doubt—such a doubt as a man acts upon in adjudging his own affairs—that each of the following matters are proved by the evidence:

I. That at the time the deceased received his mortal wound he received it from the pistol in the hands of the accused.

II. That at such time the prisoner entertained a design to take the life of the deceased, (although such design was formed at the instant of the fatal shot,) and discharged the pistol with that design.

III. That at such time the accused was mentally capable of discriminating between the right and wrong of the act of shooting, as well as of the design aforesaid.

That it will be the province of the jury to convict of manslaughter in the third degree, if the jury believe from the evidence that the accused, in the heat of passion, and without a design to effect death, killed the deceased by means of the loaded pistol. That it will be the province of the jury to convict of manslaughter in the fourth degree, if the jury believe accused provided herself with the pistol for the purpose of using it to either frighten or menace deceased, (such being an unlawful purpose,) and that using the pistol with such purpose a struggle for its possession ensued between accused and deceased, in which struggle the pistol was, in consequence thereof, discharged toward and killed deceased. Courts are established for the administration of justice, it is for this purpose that you are brought here to-day. By administering justice you operate in a two fold character—first, on the community; second, on the accused. If the community find that protection is given them by the Courts, they submit their grievances to them; if they distrust their fidelity or certainty, they take the law in their own hands. A prompt and certain punishment for a crime is the only security society can have. Let it only be generally understood that no redress can be called upon in our Courts of Justice, and [illegible] the world [illegible] from this [illegible] and [illegible] with sounds of revelry and [illegible] from the [illegible] Prayer-Book, and [illegible] them in [illegible]

Bishop WHITTINGHAM, of Minnesota, having come from the dim aisles of the grand old forests, made the architectural edifice ring with him resound with his deep tones in earnest pleading for his flock at home. He said he wanted the Society to give him about 2,000 Prayer-Books, and they would find it return to them an hundred fold. His people did not care to have things given to them after they had tested their value; then they were willing to purchase; but the Episcopal service was a new thing out his way, or at least known to but few, and they cherished it righteously.

A collection was taken up, but, as Treasury notes are modestly inaudible as they flutter gently upon the silver receiver presented, one could not judge of the extent of the donations by the encouraging clinking of former days. It must have been liberal, however, for few could withstand the appeals made.

A hymn was sung, after which Bishop KEMPER pronounced the Benediction.

The evening was fine, and the attendance good.

The Episcopal Convention—They Visit Our Charitable Institutions.

CONFIRMATION SERVICES AT THE ALMSHOUSE—REVIEW AT RANDALL'S ISLAND—A COLLATION, ADDRESSES, ETC.

At 9 A. M., yesterday, the members of the Episcopal Convention came together briefly at St. John's Chapel, and thence adjourned to Bellevue Hospital, at the foot of Twenty-sixth-street, on the East River. By 10½ A. M., a goodly number of distinguished churchmen, both clerical and lay, had assembled at the hospital. The little steamer employed in plying between the institutions on the adjacent islands was in readiness, and about 11 o'clock, the company of guests, preceded by the Right Rev. Bishop POTTER, of this Diocese, and the Hon. SIMEON DRAPER, Chairman of the Commission of Public Charities and Corrections, embarked. The party numbered in all 100 persons, including a fair representation of the ladies of the Church. The upper decks of the miniature steamer were densely crowded, and shortly after the craft got under way, a very serious accident was narrowly escaped. Right Rev. Bishop POTTER had, with a few pertinent remarks, introduced Mr. DRAPER officially to the company, and the latter had just replied and was proceeding to point out and describe the various institutions on the beautiful islands past which the boat was gliding, when, with a crash, a portion of the deck, some four or five feet in width, and reaching from side to side of the vessel, sank beneath the feet of the group crowded together to hear the Commissioner. In the first moment of alarm, all thought that the entire deck was giving way, and universal consternation prevailed. Had the weak shell, upon which scores of ladies and gentlemen were struggling, really broken through, loss of life and limb must have ensued. As it was, fortunately only a depression of some inches resulted, and the dangerous region was carefully avoided for the rest of the trip. This would have been gay and pleasant, had not a cold, drizzling rain marred the occasion. The same drawback existed throughout the greater part of the day and impaired its gratifications.

THE CIRCUIT MADE

began at Randall's Island, where WM. H. STEPHENS, Esq., the courteous and intelligent Warden, received his guests at the landing, and exerted himself in every manner to interest and entertain them. As usual, the young "Randall's Island Light Guard" were drawn up in holiday array, and went through a series of evolutions, to the great delight of the spectators, the Right Rev. Bishop POTTER exclaiming with enthusiasm, in his acknowledgment of the Guard's salute, that it was "the very best military drill he had ever seen." A brief address was prettily made by a bright little fellow of the corps, and followed by three cheers from all the boys, which were most unexpectedly and vehemently responded to by the Bishops! This novel incident greatly enlivened the party.

The various institutions have been so frequently and elaborately described, that we deem it needless to repeat the routine of their arrangement to-day. Suffice it to narrate that, after a thorough view of every department of Randall's Island, the company were conveyed in turn to the House of Refuge, Workhouse the Almshouse, the Lunatic Asylum and the Penitentiary and Hospital on Blackwell's Island. All were found in their usual excellent order and condition, and the visitors were deeply impressed with the magnitude of these splendid charities, as well as instructed and, in one sense, gratified at scenes so novel. In the Chapel of the Almshouse Department a class of eleven of the poor inmates, at the request of Rev. THOMAS K. COLEMAN, Episcopal Chaplain of the Institution, received the rite of Confirmation at the hands of Bishop POTTER, and in the presence of the distinguished congregation of clergymen. The number of Episcopal communicants on the Island is 75, and of these, 30 have been confirmed by Bishop POTTER within the year.

At the residence of Mr. KING, the Warden of the Penitentiary, a light collation was offered to the visitors, in the elegant dining-hall of the establishment. During the progress of refreshment Bishop POTTER took occasion to thank the Commissioners and the officers in charge of the Institutions for the attention shown on the present occasion, and to applaud them warmly for their continued fidelity to their noble trust. In concluding his remarks the Reverend gentleman called upon the Right Rev. Bishop BURGESS, of Maine, for an expression of sentiment, which was most eloquently and fervently given. Rev. Dr. VINTON followed in a high eulogy of the Charities and the Commissioners, and a congratulation to the members of the Convention upon the cordial spirit in which they had come together amid such scenes, after the warmth and vigor of the solemn contest through which they had passed on the preceding day and evening. The Doctor was understood to refer to the close of the rebellion debate by the adoption of the Special Committee Report. Commissioner DRAPER, then, feelingly reacknowledged the compliments of the reverend gentlemen who had spoken, and the party, after proceeding through the Penitentiary and Hospital, reembarked, landing at the Bellevue pier toward dusk.

Thus closed a day which to the strangers who were present will, undoubtedly, be memorable. To all men such scenes are startling lessons; to the good, they are examples and incitements for further glorious effort.

New-York Bible and Common Prayer-Book Society—Meeting of Its Members and Eloquent Appeals of the Bishops.

The meeting adjourned from last week was held on Tuesday evening, in Calvary Church, at the corner of Fourth-avenue and Twenty-first-street.

Bishop KEMPER, of Wisconsin, presided in robes, and read the service, while the other Bishops appeared in ordinary dress.

After the Lord's Prayer and the Gloria in Excelsis, brief and most eloquent addresses were made in behalf of the interests of the Society by—first, Bishop BURGESS, of Maine, who advocated the Prayer-Book as suggesting to the unthinking and even to the earnest inquirer "how to pray." This idea pervaded his whole discourse, disclosing how, at every important turn in an individual's experience, the rites and ceremonies herein represented applied, viz.: the baptism, confirmation, matrimony, &c., even to the solemn preparation for the hour of death. He said that $250 was but a pittance, yet it would place this soul-saving medium into the hands of 25,000 persons, and each of these gifts would open the way for the sale of nine similar volumes.

Bishop HAWKS, of Missouri, was next introduced, and spoke in behalf of his own diocese, thus presenting an incentive to prosper the Prayer-Book Society. He laid it down as the law book of "the Kingdom of Heaven," declaring it to be an epitome of the Bible. He gave an instructive and beautiful incident relating to its first introduction into his native State—North Carolina—where Bishop MOORE, of Virginia, upon searching among the forest homes of his neighboring State, found a family of six brothers—young men, held together from childhood, by the good influence of one little volume in the hands of their aged father. This little, worn Common Prayer-Book was then the only one to be found in that State. He spoke of observing its efficacy among the soldiers occupying our frontier forts, surrounded by which his field of missionary work lies. This society is now half a century or more old, and has, from its own resources, sent forth this year 13,000 Prayer-Books. Bishop TALBERT, who followed the last speaker, took for his theme "The Power of the Prayer-Book." The times, he alluded to in such terms as made every patriot eye to run down with tears; and speaking of the dissensions which marked so many sects and people, asked what power had so singularly held together the Protestant Episcopal Church, replying to himself thus: "It is the Prayer-Book—the golden chain of common prayer." He spoke at considerable length, giving a description of the way in which some distinguished ministers had been brought to Christ—how the present Bishop of Tennessee had been so struck by being applied to to read prayers in church when he was not a progressing Christian, that it had led him to ponder, and at last to embrace his present profession. He also spoke of a little Quaker boy, who, from stealing off to listen at the church door to the grand music, had at last, [illegible] a [illegible] grown, entered boldly the [illegible] and [illegible] filled with sounds from this [illegible] Prayer-Book, and now stood before them in open [illegible]

Launch of a Steam Frigate.

DESCRIPTION OF THE VESSEL.

The United States steam frigate Ticonderoga, was successfully launched at the Brooklyn Navy yard yesterday afternoon. She is a wooden vessel, and rates with the Sacramento, Lackawanna, and others of that class. Capt. BOGGS, of the Varuna, Admiral PAULDING, Capt. WORDEN, Commodore GOLDSBOROUGH, and other naval officers, besides a large number of New-York and Brooklyn people, were present. The following are the dimensions of the ship:

	Feet.	Inches
Length between perpendiculars	234	4
Breadth (molded)	37	4
Extreme breadth	38	2
Depth of hold	17	8½
Draught of water	14	—
Tonnage	1,585 tons.

The frame is of live oak, which has been seasoning for three years or] thereabout, some of it being ten years old. Her keel was laid on the 12th day of March, 1862, in the same house from which the Adirondack was launched: so that she has been seven months in course of construction. A peculiarity of the Ticonderoga is that she is sharper than any of her sister ships. She has been built with great care. Diagonal braces of the most approved description have been used in her. The model was made by Mr. DELANO, under whose personal supervision every plank has been laid. In appearance it is very attractive, the form rising gracefully as it approaches the bow.

The capstan is directory acting,—that is—the chain is taken directly on, and works around the capstan itself. The material used in making the capstan is all iron.

The Ticonderoga will have three masts, and be rigged as a foretopsail schooner. The fore and mainmast will be forward of the machinery, as in the generality of steamers; the boilers, however, will be forward of the mainmast. A hammock rail will be put on the top of the bulwarks, where the "sailor's beds" will be stowed in day-time. There are only two decks, the gun and berth decks, the armament being exclusively on the former, or upper deck, except one rifle gun, which will be placed on the forecastle, an elevated species of gallery, on which a piece of ordnance is enabled to command and cover an enemy on the bows, and "right ahead." The machinery of the Adirondack will consist of two back-acting engines, with cylinders 42 inches in diameter, and 30 inches stroke. One of SEWALL's Surface Condensers is attached, and has a large area of 373 square feet grate surface. The boilers, of which three are made, are MARTIN's, and have the usual tubes. One of them is a small one, called, in naval parlance, "a donkey." The propeller is of composition, (called "brass,") and measures 15 feet diameter, and 17 feet 6 inches mean pitch. It is calculated to make ninety revolutions per minute. The maximum horse-power is 1,510—the average 1,000.

In a day or two the keel of an iron-clad man-of-war will be laid in the house from which the Ticonderoga was launched yesterday. She will have the jaw-breaking title Miantonomoh. This vessel will be constructed exclusively by the naval authorities, except the plates, which will probably be given to contractors. The Savannah, the old Fulton, now a rebel craft, the Niagara and Adirondack, were launched from the Western ship-house.

There is a fleet of over thirty wooden men-of-war now building at the different Navy-yards, but few of them are above the rank of gunboats. The construction of sailing ships has ceased in the navy, not one being in progress just now. The next vessel to be launched at the Navy-yard will be the Shamrock.

After the launch, a party of invited guests adjourned to the Admiral's quarters. There was not as much as a rope-yarn carried away during the whole affair.

The Draft.

The Draft, so great a bugaboo to our easily-annoyed citizens, will certainly take place on the 10th of November. To-day, at No. 82 Broadway, the New-York Commissioners are notified to meet Gen. ANTHON in relation to the matter, and on Friday the Kings County Commissioners will meet him at the City Hall.

At these sessions the Chief Commissioner (Gen. ANTHON) will promulgate his instructions rel

The Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New-York do ordain as follows:

SECTION 1. The sum of five hundred thousand dollars is hereby appropriated for the purpose of aiding to support the families of the soldiers from this City who are now serving, or who may hereafter volunteer, or be ordered to serve, in the army of the United States engaged in defending the integrity of the United States.

SEC. 2. The Comptroller, who shall be the Treasurer of the Fund, shall have power to appoint one Assistant Treasurer for each Senatorial District of the City, which assistants shall disburse the funds to those persons entitled to relief, under the provisions of this ordinance, residing in the several Wards composing such Senatorial Districts. The compensation of the Assistant Treasurers shall not exceed seventy-five dollars per month, each, which the Comptroller is authorized to pay out of the fund hereby created and appropriated.

SEC. 3. The Comptroller is hereby authorized to borrow, on the credit of the Corporation of the City of New-York, the sum of five hundred thousand dollars, and to issue bonds of the Corporation therefor, which shall be designated and known as the "Volunteer Family Aid Bonds, number Three."

SEC. 4. The said bonds shall be signed by the Comptroller, countersigned by the Mayor, sealed with the common seal of the Corporation, and attested by the Clerk of the Common Council. They shall bear interest at a rate not exceeding seven per cent. per annum, and shall be due and payable within three years from the respective dates thereof.

SEC. 5. For the payment of the principal of said bonds, and the interest to accrue thereon, the faith of the Corporation of the City of New-York, and, also, all sums which may hereafter be received from the United States or from the State of New-York, for the purpose of reimbursing the City for the moneys distributed in pursuance of this ordinance, are hereby solemnly pledged; and the Comptroller is hereby authorized and required to redeem and cancel the same from time to time, at or before their maturity.

SEC. 6. The Assistant Treasurers shall pay over the moneys placed in their hands, for that purpose only to persons presenting orders signed by a majority of the members of the Committee acting for the Wards in their respective districts. Said Committee shall consist of four members each, including the Aldermen and Councilmen as acting for the several Wards, on the first day of February, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-two, together with a citizen or citizens, to be appointed by the Comptroller and City Chamberlain; which citizens must be residents of the Wards for which they are to act, except that for the purposes of this ordinance the Second and Third Wards shall be deemed and treated as belonging to and forming a part of the First Ward.

SEC. 7. The monthly allowance to the head of each family shall not exceed six dollars: for each child of the soldier under fourteen years of age, one dollar and fifty cents, provided that not more than twelve dollars per month shall be paid any one family. Payments shall be made semi-monthly, and, for the purposes intended by this section, four weeks shall constitute a month. The oldest child of the soldier shall be considered the head of the family, in case he is not living.

SEC. 8. No order for relief shall be given to any person who is not at the time of making application a resident of the City, and who is not a resident at the date of the enlistment of the soldier, on whose behalf the application for relief is made, and for at least months before the adoption of this ordinance. Relief shall only be allowed to the families of soldiers who have been mustered into the service of the United States, and are actually doing duty in camp or garrison; excepting that the families of those who are sick or wounded, or have been killed, or have died from the effects of wounds received, or disease contracted while in the service of the Government, shall be entitled to the same allowance as they would be if the soldier were in actual service.

SEC. 9. All persons applying for relief shall be required to produce a certificate from the Colonel or Lieutenant-Colonel of the regiment, or the officer commanding the corps to which the soldier belongs, that he is a member of the regiment or corps; and the Ward Committee shall indorse, on the back of the certificate or other evidence of enlistment, the date, name of applicant, relation to soldier, and the monthly allowance, which indorsement must be signed by a member of the Committee. No payments shall be made to, or on behalf of, the families of commissioned officers or soldiers who have deserted.

SEC. 10. The only parties entitled to participate in the distribution of the moneys appropriated by this ordinance are the wives, children, and widowed mothers of such soldiers as supported them prior to their enlistment. But nothing contained herein shall be understood to authorize the giving aid from the fund hereby created to those able to support themselves without it.

SEC. 11. Each Ward Committee is hereby authorized to employ a Visitor, who must be a resident of the Ward for which he is appointed, whose duty it shall be to visit all applicants at their residences, and to ascertain, by careful investigation, the truth of the allegations made by such applicant, and no order for relief shall be paid by either of the Assistant Treasurers unless the Visitor for the Ward in which the applicant resides shall certify the same to be correct. Whenever the applications in any Ward shall have reached six hundred the Committee may employ an Assistant Visitor, but said Assistant shall not be paid for a longer time than one half the further duty of the Visitors to attend the meetings of, and perform such clerical duties as may be prescribed by, the Ward Committee, and also to attend at the distributing office of their Senatorial District on the day assigned for paying applicants from their respective Wards. The compensation of the Visitors shall not exceed one dollar and fifty cents per day each.

SEC. 12. Each Ward Committee may expend, for rent, gas and other necessaries, a sum not exceeding twenty dollars per month, which the Comptroller is authorized to pay out of the fund hereby created and appropriated, on bills certified to be correct, by a majority of the Committee.

SEC. 13. Each Assistant Treasurer shall render to the Comptroller, on the first day of each month, a detailed statement of his disbursements during the preceding month, and the Comptroller shall transmit the same to each branch of the Common Council.

SEC. 14. In case an Assistant Treasurer shall discover that the party to whom any ticket or order for relief has been given is not entitled by this ordinance to the allowance named thereon, he shall withhold further payment, and immediately notify the Ward Committee by which it was issued of the fact, and the reasons therefor. If no payment has been made on the ticket, he shall at once return it to the Committee. Every person who shall wilfully make, or cause to be made, any false statements or representations for the purpose of obtaining a larger sum than that to which they are entitled under this ordinance, shall thereby be deemed to have forfeited all claims to participate in its benefits.

SEC. 15. Payment shall be made directly to the party in whose favor the ticket is given; but if by sickness, or other unavoidable circumstances, such person is unable to make personal application, the Assistant Treasurer shall require satisfactory authority for making payment to his or her representative. In no case shall payment be made for more than one ticket to the same person. If, in the opinion of the Ward Committee, it is advisable, in consequence of intemperate habits, or from other causes on the part of the person making application, to pay the amount in groceries or other necessaries, instead of money, then an order to that effect on the Assistant Treasurer, signed by a majority of the Ward Committee, shall be paid to some party authorized by the Committee to receive it.

SEC. 16. The Comptroller is hereby authorized to procure, fit up, and keep in order a suitable room for the accommodation of each of the Assistant Treasurers and the applicants in their respective districts, and also to appoint two clerks and one interpreter for each district. The compensation of the clerks shall not exceed an aggregate of sixty dollars per month each, and the interpreters forty dollars per month each.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

The forward movement of the Army of the Potomac, promised a few days ago in our special correspondence, has commenced. A portion of the army advanced early yesterday morning and occupied Charlestown, after an artillery fight of about two hours duration with the outer force of the rebels. Gen. MCCLELLAN was at Charlestown last night, and the indications were that the place would be held, even at the risk of a general engagement.

We have received important dispatches from our special correspondent with Gen. SIGEL'S army, which indicate active work in that Department soon. The rebel Gen. STUART is known to have been at Leesburgh on Monday with his cavalry, but he has since moved away from there, and is now somewhere between the Bull Run Mountain and the Blue Ridge. He was yesterday threatening an attack upon our advance guard, and Gen. STAHL advanced to meet him, with the determination to force him to fight or run. A reconnoissance to Bristow Station has established the fact that there is also a force of rebel cavalry there, while the rebels are busy running trains between Warrenton and Warrenton Junction.

The Washington Star of Wednesday says: "In the last forty-eight hours there has been much stir among our troops under HEINTZELMAN and SIGEL. All their pickets and guards have been doubled, and all their troops have been held in readiness for instant and active operations. The fact that STUART'S cavalry recrossed the river a day or two since, at a point sufficiently near to us to admit of a night's damaging dash upon somebody or something in the immediate vicinity of Washington, Georgetown or Alexandria, doubtless caused this necessary precaution immediately around us. A rumor prevails in the vicinity of Centreville, which again alleges that JOE JOHNSON is advancing toward Manassas, from the other side of the Rapidan, with a force variously estimated at from 20,000 to 40,000. While we have no idea that JEFF. DAVIS has any such force in that quarter, it is highly probable that he is sending all he has there in the direction of Manassas, to occupy the attention of HEINTZELMAN and SIGEL while LEE falls back. If any considerable rebel force is moving in this direction from Gordonsville and the Rapidan, it must be to the end we mention above. Our troops at and in advance of Centreville are certainly so on their guard, as that no rebel movement can damage them. Nor do we believe that it will for a day delay active cooperation on the part of HEINTZELMAN and SIGEL with whatever the Army of the Potomac may just now have in hand."

We have advices from New-Orleans to the 7th inst., by the arrival at this port of the steamship Potomac. The news is not specially important. Our correspondent announces that Gen. BUTLER had gone to Pensacola, where he intended to remain for a short period. The cause of his visit is not stated, but it probably has connection with the expeditions fitting out in his Department. A party of guerrillas in the vicinity of Donaldsonville had fired upon some transports on the Mississippi, but were dispersed by the gunboats. Lieut. SWASEY, of the Scioto, was killed in the encounter, and his body was brought to this city on board the Potomac. During the week ending Sept. 27, the United States Relief Commission distributed provisions to 30,420 persons in New-Orleans.

ALBERT S. ASHMEAD, Acting Assistant Quartermaster at Chambersburg, makes the following statement regarding the quantity of stores at that point when the rebels under Stuart entered the town: "There were but two hundred suits of United States uniforms on hand, being the balance of a lot which had been sent here for distribution among the hospital patients, besides about fifty articles of condemned clothing; but even these latter the rebels were glad to exchange for their own still worse ones. They destroyed four hundred and sixty-eight boxes of Confederate ammunition, which had been previously captured by our forces from Gen. LONGSTREET'S train; but this was almost worthless, as was evidenced by the fact of the little damage made by its explosion. From the time that I got word that the rebels were approaching until they entered the town was one hour. And, even in that short interval, I obtained the services of a number of men to remove the articles into the cars, but the railroad company could not furnish me with cars. I secured the safety of my papers, horses and mules, and remained in town and witnessed their entrance and departure, without removing my uniform, or being captured or paroled. There were, probably, seven hundred muskets, two hundred sabres, four hundred pistols, and a lot of accoutrements belonging to the State, which were also taken or destroyed.

A Harrisburgh correspondent of the Philadelphia Press mentions the following facts to show how the Confederates were so skillfully piloted through Pennsylvania: It appears now that the men who piloted the rebels so safely through our State during the recent raid were Pennsylvanians, Breckinridge Democrats, and notorious rascals. Their names are LOGAN, WILSON, SIMES and BRINK. The latter is believed to be the man who apprehended COOK, of JOHN BROWN'S "Army of Invasion." These traitors have been in Franklin County for seventeen years, where they have prospered, and being minutely acquainted with every road and by-path of the region, could easily pioneer the rebels in any direction. It is said that they sought an interview with HAMPTON, and cheerfully volunteered their services. Gen. J. E. B. STUART was for a long time in command of Carlisle Barracks when in the service of the United States, and several of his field officers were stationed there at different times, so that these rebels were probably as familiar with the country through they passed recently as they were with the topography of their own States.

Gov. CURTIS, at St. Louis, has received papers and dispatches from Little Rock, Ark., up to the 6th inst. They state HOLMES to be at that place with considerable force; HINDMAN at Duvall's Bluff, on White River, while PARSONS was moving north toward Missouri, with several thousand men, probably to join STEEN and MCBRIDE, the latter being either near Pocahontas or moving upon Pilot Knob. Abundant preparation is being made for these parties. Gen. STEEL'S and OSTERHAUS' Divisions of the National army are moving, and Gen. CARR remains at Helena with two divisions to guard that point. The army of the frontier, under Gen. SCHOFIELD, is at Cassville and vicinity, and the enemy has retreated beyond the Missouri line. Telegraphic communication is complete to Cassville, and Gen. CURTIS is using the wire direct to Gen. SCHOFIELD'S tent. All the troops are in good health and spirits.

Southern dates of the 9th, by way of Grenada and Memphis, have nothing new in relation to the late battles or army movements. The Grenada Appeal fears that immense armies will be hurled at once into Mississippi and sweep the State. It thinks BRAGG'S defeat probable, and urges the State authorities to assemble the entire militia force to meet the marauders. It admits a rebel loss of five thousand in the late battles. Guerrillas are actively engaged near Memphis burning cotton on its way thither. Col. JOHN FORSYTH, of Mobile, reported killed, is not dead, but a prisoner on parole.

GENERAL NEWS.

The French steam frigate Massena, now at this port, brings advices from Mexico to the 26th ult. Gen. FOREY arrived at Vera Cruz on the 22d. It is understood that, in addition to his military command, the General is intrusted with diplomatic powers superior to those of SALIGNY, who is suspected of being too much mixed in Mexican politics. No fighting had taken place, with the exception of a few guerrilla skirmishes.

The summing up of the Real murder trial was concluded in the Oyer and Terminer yesterday, and the case was given to the jury under the charge of the Court at 4½ P. M. At 10 o'clock they had not agreed upon a verdict, and there was every prospect of their remaining together all night.

The Bishops and Delegates composing the General Episcopal Convention now assembled in this City, visited the Institutons under the care of the Commissioners of Public Charities and Corrections. Hon. SIMEON DRAPER, Chairman of the Commission, accompanied his distinguished guests from Bellevue Hospital to the Islands, making a complete circuit of all the institutions. At the Almshouse Bishop POTTER confirmed, according to the rites of the Episcopal Church, eleven of the pauper inmates. At the residence of the Warden of the Penitentiary, a collation was provided, and brief addresses were made by Bishop POTTER, of this Diocese; Bishop BURGESS, of Maine; Rev. Dr. VINTON and Hon. SIMEON DRAPER. Unfortunately, the weather did not favor this excursion, but the day was instructively spent.

The Board, of Councilmen met last evening. A petition was received and referred from "up-town residents," who despair of being accommodated by the Eighth-avenue Railroad Company, to permit the Sixth-avenue Company to run a track through Fifty-ninth-street, run their cars over the track of the former Company as far as seventy-second-street; continue the track to Eighty-fifth-street, (where the grade terminates,) across this street to Sixth-avenue, and thence to Harlem River. In answer to an inquiry, the Corporation Counsel reported that persons were laying rails in Seventh-avenue and other streets on the authority of a legislative enactment, and, as he was informed, "a license, or some other writing, from the Croton Aqueduct Board or some member of that Board." If this permission had been given, Mr. TROTTER said, the party granting it should be impeached. Surprise was expressed taht Mr. BRONSON had not given an opinion in the matter. A resolution was adopted, however, instructing him to resist the laying of rails in the City without the consent of the Common Council. In respect to the removal of the rails of the Ninth-avenue Railroad Company, Mr. BRONSON reported that a temporary, and recently a perpetual injunction had been obtained by JOHN ENGLIS, a bondholder; demurrer to his complaint had been made, and the question is to be argued next week at Hempstead, Queens County. The resolution from the Aldermen, continuing the bounty till the time of the draft, was adopted with an amendment allowing $25 each to nine months' men. The new Family Aid and Fractional Currency Ordinance was discussed and finally referred to a Joint Special Committee. The resolution to appoint a Claim Agent, to obtain pay, pensions, &c., for soldiers and their families, without charge to them, and at a salary of $3,000 per annum, was referred. Mr. ORTON was astonished that the citizens had not formed societies and raised means for this purpose. The Board adjourned till 5 o'clock this afternoon.

The department of West Tennessee includes all the territory of Kentucky and Tennessee west of the Tennessee River, and also Cairo, Fort Henry and Fort Donelson. The department is under the command of Major-Gen. U. S. GRANT. Gen. GRANT has divided his department into four districts, as follows: 1. The District of Corinth, commanded by Major-Gen. ROSECRANS. 2. The District of Jackson, commanded by Major-Gen. ORD. 3. The District of Memphis, commanded by Major-Gen. SHERMAN. 4. The District of Columbus, commanded by Brig.-Gen. QUIMBY. Gen. GRANT has fixed his headquarters for the present at Jackson.

The Washington Star learns that since POPE fell back on Washington ten thousand horses have been supplied to the Army of the Potomac, though more are still required. This fact demonstrates the tremendous consumption of horseflesh in carrying on the war. The Star is assured that the Quartermaster's Department has no fixed price which it pays for army horses, and is buying all that are offered at fair prices. As it has not yet obtained all that are pressingly required, it is to be hoped that the offers on the part of the dealers in army horses may be quickly and considerably increased.

The City Council of New-Brunswick, N. J., has taken the preliminary measures toward issuing $20,000 worth of shinplasters for the convenience of the people. As the cost of preparing this amount is likely to be $1,540, it is a question whether the Council will not determine to wait for the postal currency.

The Stock Market was firm yesterday, with a strong demand for the New-York and Western Railways. Gold fluctuated from 137 down to 132¾, and up again to 134¼@¾ per cent.

The fluctuations in Gold and Exchange yesterday disturbed the market for Breadstuffs, which opened heavily, but closed decidedly in favor of sellers. Cotton was less sought after. A fair business was transacted in Coffee, Sugars, Spices, Tallow, Hay, Hops, Wool, Hides and Leather. Pork, Lard, Bacon and Oils, were quite active at advanced rates. Beef, Rice, Hemp, Laths, Seeds, Fish and Naval Stores were lightly dealt in. The freight market exhibited less activity.

SLAVERY AS CONSERVED BY WAR.—A recent Richmond paper, in speaking of the devastation caused to the State of Virginia by the invasion of the National armies, declares that 30,000 slaves have been lost to their owners. In the States of Tennessee, Kentucky, Arkansas and Missouri, so many have not been lost, but probably half the number. In South Carolina, Georgia and Louisiana, we may safely assume that half as many more have been released from bondage. These calculations give a grand total of 60,000 slaves wholly lost to Southern masters by reason of the war. These slaves, at a valuation of $800 each, represent a wealth of thirty millions of dollars.

But during all the time when these losses were occurring, our Government was not making emancipation a specialty, but quite the reverse. Gen. HALLECK'S order kept slaves in the West wholly out of our lines, and in the East the policy of our Generals was sufficiently dubious to render the Union camps a doubtful place of refuge to the fleeing contraband.

But, if thirty million dollars' worth of slaves were lost, in one year, under a conservative system of war, what may we expect when the President's new policy is fairly at work? The rebels say they will fight till they "get their rights," and among these rights at present is property in slaves. If they are pleased with the auspicious prospects of the war, as it affects their property as well as independence, then we conclude that so complacent a people never before risked their lives and property on the wager of battle.

"Let Them Go."

Take Richmond, and then, if they insist, let them go, argues Prince JOHN, next to Mr. SEYMOUR, the principal speaker at the Ratification Meeting. And yet these same leaders affect indignation when their loyalty is questioned. They seem to take it for granted that the people have neither the wit to discern, nor the spirit to resent. In ordinary times, such presumption would be incredible. But when rebels are so monstrously infatuated, it is not strange that rebel sympathizers should also display uncommon folly. Nobody can be deceived in the meaning of this speech. If we are to let the rebels go, after taking Richmond, why not before? What care we for Richmond, but as a vantage ground against the rebellion? Why spend blood and treasure in gaining the rebel Capital, if, when gained, we are to give the Confederacy option whether to keep its power or not? No man in his senses can believe that our encampment on Shockoe Hill would make the rebel leaders love us better than before. It would only humiliate and embitter. If option is to be the word, it had better be spoken on the Potomac. In either case it is certain that the rebel managers would not for an instant entertain the idea of returning to the Union. They know full well that such return would be their political annihilation. Every calculation and every instinct would impel them to stick to the Confederacy. Rebel option means national disunion—nothing more or less. Mr. VAN BUREN'S exhortation to "let them go if," is simply an exhortation to let them go anyhow. The locality where the alternative is presented is nothing. Whether at Washington, or Richmond, or Charleston, or New-Orleans, the offer would amount to a recognition of Confederate independence. It would give the rebels all they ask for. We say then that it is absurd for these men to protest adhesion to the war. Follow their counsel, and there is nothing left to fight for. It is just as absurd for them to claim loyalty. This language rivets and clinches every charge of disloyalty.

We tell these factionists that they are known. There is treason on their brow, as plain as if a C. S. brand had burned it there. No man can talk peace at this juncture, directly or indirectly, and be true to his country. No person can hold out to the rebels the hope of a settlement at this point, or at that point, or at any point this side of absolute submission to the old Constitution, without complicity with the rebels. The great body of the people perfectly well understand that there can be no concession that is not secession, and that secession is treason. They are thoroughly pervaded, too, with the sense that the treason must either be crushed, or it must prevail; that it must either be subjected to authority, or it must overthrow authority. Thus they have responded with such fervent spirit to the call of the President for a new army. They are now sending forth six hundred thousand of their brothers and sons for the express purpose of giving the death-stroke to the rebellion; not to parley with it, not to conciliate it, not even to hurt and cripple it, but to smite it down, and utterly exterminate it. That is what the people mean. It is this public spirit, and no other, that surcharges loyal hearts, the wide land through. The cravens that would shrink at this crisis, the recreants that would stop to calculate whether further war against rebellion will pay, or whether it will be best to give secession leave to go, will find themselves, in the day the people move, but chaff before the whirlwind. Their little devices will not avail them. Their puny protestations of loyalty will meet contempt only.

They may as well set their house in order at once. Our people are as resolute to carry this war faithfully through as any people in the land, and as profoundly determined to accept no result but the complete restoration of the nation's unity. It is safe to say that no State has derived such transcendent advantage from the Union as the Empire State, and that none has such measureless interests bound up in its maintenance. There is no effort it will not put forth, and no sacrifices it will not make, to save our nationality. It is the last spot in the North where Secessionists can gain popular favor—the last spot where the cry, "Let them go," can be raised with success. November will show this.

UNION CONDITIONAL AND UNCONDITIONAL.—The Boston Courier of Tuesday invents or reports a conversation supposed to have been held on board of a Sound steamer, between some Down-Easter of an "inquiring mind" and a paroled Louisiana prisoner from Antietam, in which conversation the captive rebel is described as declaring that the election of SEYMOUR in New-York and of other Democrats throughout the North would bring the rebel cause to immediate ruin. A Democratic victory at the North, this astute rebel is made to say, would give such tremendous force to the Union sentiment at the South that thousands of rebel soldiers would throw down their arms, refuse to fight any longer, and go home to await the peaceful restoration of the "good old times."

Now it is possible that a paroled prisoner from Antietam—"himself a determined rebel"—may have said all this, for the Southerners generally are skillful politicians, and the Courier's captive being deprived of the chance of slaying the Yankees with his sword, may have thought it patriotic to seize upon the chance of wounding them with his tongue.

But it is important that the misrepresentations, of which this legend is a specimen, should not gain ground among the Northern people. It is important that the Northern people should clearly understand their true position relatively to the South, and that they should realize the solemn fact that the one point of interest to the South in our pending elections will be the evidence which those elections shall afford of the union or the division of the North in regard to the unconditional prosecution of the war. The President's proclamation of emancipation has not introduced any new element into the contest; it has simply announced the final development of an issue imminent in the contest from the hour of its commencement. A Democratic victory will be, in substance, a verdict given against the presidential proclamation, and therefore by direct implication against the prosecution of the war itself. This will be its whole meaning, and for the rebels its only interest. "Vote the Democratic ticket," cry the supporters of that ticket, and signify to the South that you mean to fight only for the Union." But this is precisely what the South is fighting against, has fought against, and will fight against to the end of its money and its men. The South fights against the Union unconditionally—it fights just as sternly against a Union protecting Slavery, as against a Union abolishing Slavery. If the North meets it in the field with a conditional support of a conditional Union, is it not plain to the meanest capacity that a time must come when the condition being no longer practicable, the North must retire from the contest?

The South, at least, is clear-headed enough to see the contest in this its genuine light, and the triumph of the Democratic Party must inevitably cheer the Southern temper with the hope of a conquered peace and of Southern independence.

Don Pacifico Abroad.

We have the pleasure to announce to our readers, to-day, the perfect safety of the Union. The existing war can last, at the furthest, but a week or two longer. The seceding States are about to return to our arms, under a general amnesty, guaranteed by the Czar of Russia and the Sultan of Turkey. Mr. LINCOLN has made arrangements to abdicate in favor of Mr. BUCHANAN, who has consented, for this time only, to make a positively last appearance upon the political stage.

For all these mercies we are indebted to the energetic patriotism of a distinguished American, hitherto unknown to fame, but henceforth dear to the heart of civilization, and of Colorado Territory, in which he resides when he is at home, if, indeed, a man of heart so large can be properly said to be at home in one place rather than in another.

Mr. WM. CORNELL JEWETT, as some of our readers may remember, recently published in the Evening Express, of this City, a highly interesting and important letter, in which he informed the world and the rest of mankind that he had just visited Wheatland, and that he was on the point of visiting Europe. He told us that Mr. BUCHANAN was well, as also that the sage of Lancaster, laying his hand upon his heart, or at least upon his watch-pocket, had protested to Mr. WM. CORNELL JEWETT his entire irresponsibility for anything that had ever happened at any time and to any body.

Mr. WM. CORNELL JEWETT furthermore told us that, inspired by his communion with this immaculate old man, he was upon the point of sailing at once for Europe, there to intervene and put an end to our cruel civil war. Let us confess that when we read Mr. WM. CORNELL JEWETT'S proclamation of this his intention, we didn't believe he would execute it. We thought he was poking fun at us in our misfortunes. We looked upon him as a heartless quiz. We had no more faith in him than Mr. SUMNER has in GEO. FRANCIS TRAIN, or GEORGE WILKES in Gen. MCCLELLAN.

We were wrong. WM. CORNELL JEWETT has really gone to Europe, and to Morley's Hotel. We don't wish to injure Mr. MORLEY'S business, for he keeps a very decent house, but the fact is as we state it, WM. CORNELL JEWETT really dates from that well known resort of wandering Americans, a little note addressed by him to his friends, the "Governments of Europe." He does not ask "the Governments" to dine with him, which they would no doubt be glad to do; but he solemnly adjures them to mind what he has to say and then says it—and a very remarkable saying it is.

"If you please," says W. C. J. to the Governments, "you must step in and put a stop to this little war in America. I have left America and Colorado Territory to make you do this, and if you don't do it I shan't care about going home again." Of course "the Governments" will do what W. C. J. requires. He gives them the most cogent reasons in the world for doing it. Hear him:

"Let it be remembered the rebellion is not a failure of American institutions, nor a war against the basis of our Government—the right of the people to govern; that, unlike all rebellions, it has a local cause in a sentiment, noble in its integrity of purpose, blind in its premature application, at variance with constitutional and State slave rights; that, outside of the want of constitutional provision, secession under the present state of affairs is impossible from the powerless position of foreign Governments to recognize the Southern Confederacy without the recognition first of the parent Government; that the Southern people are not, at heart, against the Union, nor the people of the loyal States simply opposing a deemed invasion of their soil, under a secret under-current policy to destroy the institution of Slavery, which they would, I believe, surrender for European recognition, or, in the absence of coercion, to a just-ruling Northern sentiment as to their constitutional rights, for peace; that neither the people of the loyal States nor the army are opposed to Slavery as connected with the war."

Do you suppose that any "Government" which is fit to be a Government, can read this, and resist the author? The matter is made so plain that any "Government" must be an ass not to understand it, and a tiger not to be touched by so lucid a picture of national woes, and their remedy. It really was almost superfluous for W. C. J. to reinforce his appeal with this further reference to authority:

"In defence of this view, I quote the sound and timely opinion of EX-President BUCHANAN—"Foreign interference is desirable in preserving the Union." The foresight of EX-President FILLMORE—"A convention is the only means for a final adjustment of the national difficulties."

Here we take issue with FILLMORE, BUCHANAN and W. C. J. Neither "foreign interference," nor a "Convention," is the only means for the final adjustment of our "national difficulties." JEWETT is that only means. Let "the Governments" advise JEWETT to come home and hold a Convention of one in the Park. Before he shall have met three times, the whole thing will be ended, our armies disbanded, our feuds appeased, and the Union as JEWETT justly remarks, "identified in the progress of the world."

Revolutions are wonderful things, but a fool is always more wonderful than any revolution. On the whole, we regard JEWETT as the culmination of the great Southern rebellion.

The Black Flag vs. Better Feeling.

A few weeks ago, when the President's Emancipation Proclamation was first promulgated, the rebel Congress was profoundly agitated. Violent philippics were hurled against the people of the North—threats of an exterminating war were freely indulged in—and the usual alarming apparition of a "black flag," with death's head and cross-bones painted in ghostly white upon it, flashed before our faces. Who of all the loyal millions of the loyal States would be spared, if the South, justly inflamed by the President's edict, should declare a war of extermination against us, and henceforth "give no quarter?" The Virginia Legislature, then in session, sympathized with this frenzy, and forthwith prepared to utter a decree that no person in that State should be held to have committed a crime who might kill soldier or citizen engaged in carrying out the President's Proclamation.

We have not watched the further action of the Confederates very closely on this exciting and "exasperating" subject, because we have lacked the Richmond papers, in which Confederate history is written. We know, however, that the Richmond Whig, in publishing what we have recited, promised the world the immediate inauguration of a war of unspeakable horrors, "for," said the Whig, "after the promulgation of the President's policy, the Confederates can hold no terms with the North."

So much for the first intimations of what the rebels would do on account of the Emancipation edict. The record of what they have done since the Proclamation was known among them, is in astounding contrast with their bloody programme.

First, we find the rebel Government exhibiting extraordinary industry and unimpeachable suavity in the paroling and returning of Union prisoners in their hands. Many who have suffered for six months in dungeons, are finding liberty at last.

Second, Col. WOOD, Keeper of Capitol Prison at Washington, who was at Richmond a few days ago, effecting exchanges of prisoners, was taken with respectful ceremony on a tour of inspection through a Richmond prison-house, and his complimentary comments on its condition made public, with manifest pride and complacency. On the 9th inst., when Gen. BUELL'S army, marching out of Louisville in pursuit of BRAGG, came up, near Salt River, with a portion of the enemy, the rebel officer gravely sent in a flag of truce, asking "a suspension of hostilities until they should hear the result of the mission of the Peace Commissioners, whom the Confederate Government was about to send to Washington!" Last week, when Gen. NEGLEY, at Nashville, applied to the guerrilla chief at Gallatin, for a safe conduct through his lines of over two hundred sick and wounded prisoners that he was desirous of sending North, the rebel officer not only granted the request promptly, but sent forward a party of his own men ahead of the Union train, to have bread baked for them each day in advance!

All these events have occurred since the "black flag" was threatened. We are heartily glad to record them. We do not impute them to any motive derogatory to Southern courage or chivalry. On the contrary, we prefer to attribute them to the redeeming virtues of good feeling and humanity which are at the bottom of the hearts, we hope, of all American people. They are evidences, we think, of the subsidence of passion in the South, which not even the President's proclamation can reinflame. May we not hope that if in a state of war such amenities can exist, a restored Union is not impossible, even with Slavery perished, as it ought to perish, in every land of light and nominal freedom.

NEWS FROM FORTRESS MONROE.

The Blockade—A Skirmish With a Rebel Battery at Wilmington, N. C.

FORTRESS MONROE, Wednesday, Oct. 15.

The gunboat Wyandotte arrived here yesterday, and was placed as the blockading boat, her duties being to board all vessels coming in or going out of the Roads, and to see that their passes are correct.

The steamer Guide arrived here this morning from Baltimore, and leaves this evening for Beaufort, N. C.

The United States gunboat Mahaska, from off Wilmington, N. C., came into the Roads this morning. She experienced very heavy weather, and lost one man overboard while securing an anchor. She reports that just before leaving Wilmington, the rebels opened fire from field-pieces on shore on the gunboat Maratanzas, killing a Master's Mate, one sailor, and wounding five men, two mortally. The Mahaska immediately opened on the rebels, who subsequently retired, although they were out of range of the Mahaska's guns.

One hundred and ninety rebel prisoners arrived here on the Baltimore boat this morning from Fort McHenry. They are mostly wounded, and will be taken to Aiken's Landing this afternoon.

The frigate Minnesota will leave Newport's News to-morrow for some more important station.

The rear portion of the buildings of the Hygeia Hotel are nearly all demolished. The main and front portion, being on lower ground, and consequently out of obstructing range of the guns of the fortress, will probably be allowed to remain.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Oct. 16.

WHY THE ARMY HAS NOT MOVED.

Adjutant-Gen. THOMAS is reported, to-day, as having explained the late inactivity of the Army of the Potomac, by saying that it was waiting for shoes for the soldiers.

THE ELECTION NEWS.

The news from the late elections has caused a feeling of disappointment and despondency among the friends of the administration; but the results are regarded by many as a rebuke of hesitation and timidity of the Government and as an admonition that the sword must at once be drawn in earnest and the scabbard thrown away.

Reliable advices from the West give the Democrats thirteen out of the nineteen representatives in Ohio, and the State ticket. VALLANDIGHAM, GURLEY and GROSSBECK are defeated. They also give the Democrats Indiana, and gain of one Congressman.

GEN. FREMONT.

Gen. FREMONT expects soon to be in Washington, preliminary to his assignment to an important command in the Southwest.

GEN. MORGAN.

The statement published nearly a week since in the Washington dispatches of one of your contemporaries, that Gen. MORGAN had been suspended from his command on account of his retreat from Cumberland Gap, is believed by the Secretary of War to be untrue, as nothing of the kind is known in his Department.

GEN. MARTINDALE.

In the case of Gen. MARTINDALE, no witnesses except Gen. BUTTERFIELD have been examined, and the Court stands adjourned till eleven o'clock to-morrow for want of witnesses for the prosecution.

SECRETARY CHASE AND THE BANKERS.

The report that a deputation of New-York bankers had come to Washington to consult with Secretary CHASE as to the best means of preventing the further appreciation of gold, is entirely without foundation.

GEN. POPE AND THE INDIAN TROUBLES.

The exasperation of the people of Minnesota against the Indians in consequence of their late depredations and murders in that State, is so violent, that they insist on the extermination of the hostile tribes. With a view of punishing the guilty and protecting the innocent, Gen. POPE has taken about fifteen hundred of the Sioux to St. Paul, where, it is understood, that he proposes to dispense justice without the troublesome preliminaries of legal trial. But as the Government has not decided to adopt the "short shrift" policy; and as the continued support of a small army of savage prisoners must necessarily draw heavily on the commissary stores of the Department, an effort will immediately be made to effect a permanent settlement of the difficulties in such a way as to punish the actually guilty and secure the innocent against the misapplied vengeance of the community. It is with this purpose that Judge USHER, the Assistant Secretary of the Interior, goes to Minnesota.

GEN. HALLECK AND THE NEW-YORK REGIMENTS.

A new-York gentleman, who spoke freely to Gen. HALLECK, a few evenings since, on the subject of the injustice done in his first letter declining to reaccept the services of certain New-York State militia regiments, on the ground that they had returned home once before at a critical time, though asked to remain, received an explanation substantially as follows: The General-in-Chief, on receiving the offer of the regiments in question to return, was not aware under what circumstances they had then recently left Washington, as he had never been consulted, nor had any order for their being mustered out passed through his hands. On receiving their offer to return, therefore, he at once laid the matter before the Secretary of War, who substantially told him that he had never given any order sending them back; that, on the contrary, it had been his earnest wish, expressed to several of their commanding officers, that they should remain until a sufficient force of the new volunteer levies had arrived to replace them; and on these premises, the Secretary naturally arrived at the conclusion, as no order, that he or Gen. HALLECK knew of, had been given relieving them, that the militia regiments must have insisted on going home without authority at the expiration of the term for which they had been sworn in. On these representations, Gen. HALLECK sent the communication declining to reaccept their services, and it was not until the just indignation of the regiments found expression through the journals of the day, that a peremptory order sending them home, and directing that they be mustered out of service on the expiration of their three-months' term, was found mixed up with the archives of the Adjutant-General's Department. This order, it seems, was regarded as one of mere routine, and as such had never been submitted either to the Secretary of War or General-in-Chief, but had been issued by the Adjutant-General in the ordinary course of routine business. Immediately upon seeing this, Gen. HALLECK wrote to Mr. ASPINWALL a letter fully exonerating the New-York regiments, but in which he was prevented from fully explaining his own position by a desire not to involve others in the origin of a mistake for which he himself had been, though unjustly, held responsible. As a matter of course, most of the routine or merely formal business of the Adjutant-General's Department is transacted without special consultation with the Secretary of War or General-in-Chief, in whose names all orders are issued; and the trouble in this case has arisen exclusively from the error of the Adjutant-General in regarding an order sending home half-a-dozen brave and well-disciplined regiments at a critical moment, as an order-of-course—a thing not worth troubling the higher military authorities about. The present organization of the Adjutant-General's Department is defective—the same officer now receiving orders both from the Secretary of War and General-in-Chief, thus producing constant confusion, and exposing the service to contradictory orders and information. For this admitted evil, it is to be hoped that Congress at its next session will provide a remedy by a thorough reorganization of the whole Department.

THE COLONIZATION SCHEME.

Senator POMEROY has returned, and is sanguine in regard to the success of his Colonization enterprise. He believes that he shall found a colony at or near the very spot originally contemplated.

AMBROSE W. THOMPSON is also here, supposed to be on the same business.

THE DRAFT IM LOWER MARYLAND.

The draft in St. Charles, St. Mary's and another of the Southern Maryland Counties did not take place on Wednesday, on account of the incompleteness of the enrollment. In Prince George's County, however, it was executed, and without the occurrence of any serious disturbance—the latter fact, probably, being due to the precaution taken by the Government of stationing troops at different points there to preserve order.

DECISIONS BY COMMISSIONER OF INTERNAL REVENUE.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has decided that when a person resides in the same district where he has property subject to taxation, although his office be in another district, the tax must be assessed and collected in the district in which the property is situated.

Also, if a manufacturer, living in a district where a portion of his books are kept for selling, shipping, and consigning the manufactures, has a counting-room, factory or store, in another district, where the operatives and others are supplied with stores, and invoices are made and kept of the productions of said factory, then the tax must be assessed and collected in the district where the factory is situated. If the selling-house is really the property of the manufacturer, the goods may be removed to the salesroom and the tax paid where sold; but if the selling is a commission-business, conducted by a different party, the tax must be paid when the goods are removed from the factory.

COL. BERDAN TO BE PROMOTED.

Many prominent New Yorkers, and others, are now actively pressing upon the President and Secretary of War the propriety of appointing Col. BERDAN, the famous organizer of the sharp-shooting branch of our service, a Brigadier-General. Col. BERDAN is rapidly convalescing from the effects of the injuries received on the Peninsula, and it is thought will be ready to resume command in a few days.

GEN. STONEMAN NOT TO BLAME.

A statement in the Washington dispatch of one of your colemporaries does great injustice to Gen. STONEMAN, now commanding KEARNY'S Division, and stationed at Poolesville, Md. We have it from disinterested gentlemen, who know the facts, that Gen. MCCLELLAN'S dispatch did not reach Gen. STONEMAN until about half an hour after the firing was heard from Gen. PLEASANTON; and that no information had been previously given him of STUART'S movements on his return. Gen. STONEMAN'S force is small at best, and has been distributed, on picket duty, along a line of over thirty miles. He had sent a special order to Gen. ROBINSON, advancing from Rockville with a Brigade, to hasten to Poolesville, but the latter did not arrive until after STUART had escaped.

Had Gen. MCCLELLAN sent his dispatch by a special messenger, instead of trusting it to a wire likely to be cut, it would have been more likely to reach its destination; and, as the case stands, would probably have arrived in time to enable Gen. STONEMAN to participate in the rebel hunt.

STRAGGLING

Officers present at the battle of Antietam, state that not less than 15,000 of our soldiers dropped out of the ranks and fell to the rear, while the columns were advancing on the enemy.

It is to be hoped that the President will not longer, through a mistaken clemency, which is unjust to the brave men who bear the brunt of our battles, withhold his assent to the proposed order of the War Department, which will give to all commissioned officers the right to cut or shoot down any cowards who may be found leaving the ranks while in face of the enemy.

SECRETARY CHASE ON DUTY.

Secretary CHASE has so far recovered from his late indisposition that he was able to be at the Deprirtment to-day on the execution of his official dutses.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM STUART.

The great rebel freebooter, in his late enterprise into the North, narrowly missed fourteen hundred fat cattle, destined to supply beef for the National Commissaries, and which would have made a welcome addition to his spoils for the replenishment of the Lenten larder of LEE'S army. They were en route from Pennsylvania, and STUART passed within a mile or two of the drove as he was on his way back to Virginia.

ARTIFICIAL LIMBS FOR MUTILATED SOLDIERS.

Medical Director ABBOTT has issued an order directing that such patients as have suffered amputation of the leg shall, as soon as able, be removed to St. Elizabeth Hospital, opposite the Navy-yard, where they will be supplied with artificial limbs.

PATRIOTIC CHARITY.

The employes in the Washington Navy-yard have donated nearly $1,000 for the relief of families of volunteers from this District.

CAPT. ROGERS.

Capt. C. P. R. ROGERS, commander of the United States frigate Wabash, is in the city.

TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Oct. 16.

THE DEPRECIATION OF PAPER MONEY.

The depreciation of paper money is inconveniently felt by the Government in its transactions, including the difference in exchange to pay the Navy and civil expenses distant from points where the United States notes can be made available.

From a similar cause many contractors will be involved in heavy losses, if not bankruptcy, owing to the largely increased prices of the articles which they have obligated themselves to furnish. Already, it is said, they will apply to Congress for relief.

A RESERVE CORPS.

The subject of always having a large and efficient reserve corps is popular in military circles, and among the suggestions is one that it should be placed under the Military Governorship of the District of Columbia, in connection with the reconstruction and organization of the troops constantly arriving from the several States.

THE REBEL EARTHWORKS ON THE POTOMAC DESTROYED.

All the old rebel earthworks on the Potomac River have been destroyed or rendered useless. During the period in which the gunboats were engaged in the work at Cockpit Point, the rebels, in squads of cavalry, with four field-pieces, made their appearance; but a few shells thrown among them deterred them from making an attack.

THE MOVEMENTS OF STUART'S CAVALRY.

The Star of this afternoon, says:

"We are sure from information, on which we can rely, that after reaching Leesburgh on Sunday morning last, the rebel STUART halted his force there, between 2,500 and 3,000 cavalry, with three pieces of artillery, until near noon of the next day. Meantime, a considerable force of the enemy, consisting of infantry and artillery, approached within supporting distance of STUART, coming down the Winchester turnpike. LEE'S idea evidently was that a dash would be made with a small force from this vicinity upon STUART at Leesburgh, expecting that he was there entirely unsupported. Due care was, however, taken by STUART to move off for Winchester ere a lapse of time sufficient for a considerable force from this vicinity to get up to him."

ANOTHER REVIEW.

The Second Brigade of CASEY'S Division were reviewed this afternoon by Gen. CASEY. They acquitted themselves unusually well for new recruits, and did credit to the instruction of their officers and the skill of the accomplished tactician who has them in command.

PROMOTION OF COL. BARLOW.

Col. FRANCIS C. BARLOW, of the Sixty-first New-York Regiment, has been appointed Brigadier-General for, to quote from the official notice of his promotion, "distinguished conduct at the battle of Fair Oaks." Gen. BARLOW was severely wounded at Antietam, and now lies in a delicate condition in New-York.

THE ARMY AND NAVY.

Order No. 143 from the Adjutant-General's office announces so much of General Orders as dismisses Surgeon EDWARD B. DALTON, of the Thirty-sixth New-York Volunteers, is, by direction of the President, revoked.

Major J. C. AUSTIN, of the One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Pennsylvania, heretofore dismissed from the service, is reinstated.

Commander DOWNS has been ordered to the Nahant.

By direction of the President, Capt. CHARLES H. WEBBER, First Regiment Artillery, is dismissed the service of the United States.

So much of General Orders No. 125 as dismisses Lieut. WM. WARREN, Thirty-eighth New-York Volunteers, is, by direction of the President, revoked.

The Real Case.

The trial of MRS. REAL has occupied seven days, and at midnight of yesterday was not yet concluded. A report of yesterday's proceedings is given on the second page. The case was given to the jury at 20 minutes past 4 o'clock, and the universal impression was that a verdict of acquittal would be brought in in fifteen minutes. Time wore on, and the long hours of the night were reached, when Judge BARNARD instructed the Sheriff, that in case of a non-conclusion at 10 o'clock MRS. REAL should be remanded to the Tombs. MRS. REAL spent the evening in the rooms of the District-Attorney, accompanied by several ladies and gentlemen, who were determined to remain with her to the end. She was perfectly calm outwardly, but gave occasional tokens of great mental anxiety. At 10¼ P. M., under charge of the Deputy Sheriff, she was at to the Tombs.

At 11¼ P. M., the jury, under charge of officers E. J. KNIGHT, KIMMENS and PURDY, were locked up in the Supreme Court Chambers, and every one else was ordered off.

The feeling of the outsiders tallied with that of those whose experience entitled them to predict—that either an acquittal, a verdict of manslaughter in fourthe th degree, or a non-agreement would be the result.

The second-named involves a fine of from one cent to $1,000, and an imprisonment of one day or two years in the discretion of the Court.

A non-agreement leaves a new trial optional with the District-Attorney, and the question as to amount of bail is in the hands of the Court, which is guided more or less by the determination of the District Attorney.

The Court will reassemble to-day at 10 A. M., to await the action of the Grand Jury.

FIFTH CONGRESSIONAL.—The Jeffersonian Democracy, of the Fifth Congressional District, last night nominated MICHAEL CORCORAN as the candidate for that District.

NEWS FROM MEXICO.

THE SITUATION OF THE FRENCH ARMY

Arrival of Gen. Forey—He is Intrusted with Diplomatic Powers and Supersedes Saligny.

By the steam frigate Massena, which arrived at quarantine Wednesday, we have news from Vera Cruz up to the 26th of September, a week later.

At that date the vomito had materially decreased, and hopes of a comparatively healthier season were entertained. The arrivals of the French soldiers were progressing slowly, sixteen thousand only having landed at Vera Cruz when the Massena left. It was said that the expedition, on account of unexampled delays, would not leave Orizaba before the end of October.

Some slight guerrilla skirmishes had taken place at rancho Techeria, seven miles from Vera Cruz, without casualties on either side. Heavy rains had converted the roads into impassable streams, and rendered communication almost impracticable.

The most important news brought by the French frigate is the arrival of Gen. FOREY at Vera-Cruz on the 22d of September. In addition to his rank of military commander, the General is entrusted with diplomatic powers superior to those exercised by the French Minister, BENOIT DE SALIGNY, who, although retaining his place still, will be, diplomatically speaking, subordinate to Gen. FOREY. This has been done, it is said, to satisfy public opinion, which, right or wrong, suspects DE SALIGNY of having a personal interest in Mexican politics.

The rumor at Vera Cruz was, that after the death of Gen. ZARRAGOZEA, the Mexican army had disbanded, and organized into small guerrilla parties, overrunning the country in every direction.

The Massena has come to New-York to take provisions, and will leave this city for Vera Cruz in a few days.

THE DRAFT.

Meeting of the Surgeons Under the Order.

The Surgeons appointed to act under the Commissioners of the Draft in this City, assembled last evening at the Central Office, No. 82 Broadway, to receive from Gen. ANTHON instructions relative to the course to be pursued by them in reference to exemptions.

The General, not having received a copy of official instructions from headquarters, could merely communicate an outline of the usual rules to be pursued in the discharge of the duty devolving upon the military medical inspectors.

The only question that arose before the Surgeons, who are all men of rank in their profession, and all cheerfully willing to serve, was in reference to their distribution among the Wards. It was finally agreed to leave that matter in the hands of Gen. ANTHON. The enrollment books are complete, and in the possession of the Sheriff, to whom they were delivered yesterday, and the most vigorous efforts are made to enable the Commissioners to begin their labors on Monday next. A list of clerks, one for each Ward, was, last night, read and temporary appointments made, but as considerable modifications may be necessary, we refrain from publishing the same until officially authorized. Ten days from the opening of the work will be devoted to the consideration of exemption claims, and it is greatly to be desired that applicants should, even now, come forward as rapidly as possible. Those who flatter themselves that they have evaded or can evade the enrollment, are sadly mistaken. The system is perfect, and derelicts are only doubly liable. One result of this complete canvass of our population is to show that New-York City contains more than a million of inhabitants.

Meeting of the Brooklyn Surgeons.

A meeting of the Surgeons recently appointed by the Governor, under the late order for a draft to fill the quota of Kings County, was held at the City Hall, last evening. The object was to define the districts, and assign the members, so that each one will be enabled to confine his duties within a certain limit. After an interchange of views, the meeting adjourned until some future time. Meantime a definite plan will probably be prepared for submission at the next meeting.

The Draft in Brooklyn.

The rolls containing the names of all persons liable to be drafted in Brooklyn, were sent to that city, from Gen. ANTHON'S office, No. 82 Broadway, yesterday afternoon. The express wagon containing the records, which were encased in tin boxes, was escorted by a platoon of policemen, formed in a hollow square. The rolls were placed in the possession of the Sheriff, Mr. A. F. CAMPBELL. The total number of men liable to be drafted in Kings County will not exceed 1,000, instead of double that number, as heretofore reported.

The Enlistments in the State.

ALBANY, Thursday, Oct. 16.

Blank alphabetical lists for the names of all persons who have enlisfed from the different towns in the State since the 2d of July, as required by Section 8, General Oorders No. 70, are being prepared under the direction of the Adjutant-General, and will be forwarded to each District Committee without delay. These lists are to be approved by a vote of the District Committee, and returned to the Adjutant-General by the 1st day of November.

The Draft in Boston.

BOSTON, Thursday, Oct. 16.

A large crowd are in attendance at Faneuil Hall to-day, to witness the process of "drafting." The proceedings are attended with entire good nature on the part of the audience.

BROOKLYN NEWS.

FIRE IN PUBLIC SCHOOL—A FEARFUL PANIC—A NUMBER OF CHILDREN INJURED.—Yesterday afternoon, as the children in Public School No. 20, in South Fourth-street, E. D., were engaged in their studies, smoke was discovered issuing from the flues of the heating apparatus. An examination disclosed the alarming fact that the wood work was on fire, and in a few moments the greatest confusion prevailed. The children made a simultaneous and frantic attempt to escape from the apartment, numbers rushing to the windows for the purpose of jumping out, which one or two actually did. The teachers directed their efforts to getting the children out, and succeded in effecting the egress of nearly all of them uninjured. But in the desperate attempt to get out a number were trampled upon, crushed and more or less hurt. One boy named DAVIS, whose parents reside in South Fourth-street had his leg broken. A little girl named EMILY WASHBURNE, residing in South Eighth-street, sustained a compound fracture of the collar-bone. A boy, whose name our reporter could not ascertain] was suffocated with the smoke, and taken out of the building in an insensible condition. His recovery is considered doubtful. The above, it is believed, are all the casualties of a serious character that occurred. As soon as the alarm for the fire was given, it was responded to by the Fire Department in strong force. And when it became known that the school house was on fire, the greatest excitement, confusion and alarm prevailed. Mothers rushed to the rescue of their children, and hundreds of spectators were anxious to render aid. The firemen and the police rendered efficient and important aid, both in extinguishing the fire and rescuing the children. The origin of the fire is presumed to have been entirely accidental. The damage done to the building is estimated at $500. The building will not be fit for use for several weeks.

DEATH OF COMMODORE WM. L. HUDSON, U. S NAVY.—Commodore WILLIAM L. HUDSON, U. S. Navy, died yesterday morning, at his residence in Brooklyn, very suddenly. He retired, on Wednesday night, in his usual health. Commodore HUDSON was a native of this State, and entered the navy Jan. 1, 1816. He completed nineteen years and eleven months' sea service up to 1861; was sixteen years and one month on shore or other duty, and was but nine years unemployed during his forty-five years of naval service. He was last at sea in August, 1858, when he returned with the Niagara after the cable expedition, and was then placed in command of the Charlestown, Mass., Navy-yard, whence he was relieved a short time since for duty in New-York. Commodore HUDSON held severa very important naval positions. He was second in command of the exploring expedition under Capt. WILKES. He was in command of the Peacock sloop-of-war when her pilot ran her on the rocks when entering Astoria, at the entrance of the Columbia River. Upon the late reorganization of the navy he was placed 21 on the list of retired Captains.

WILSON.—At Ebenezer Church Hospital, Washington, D. C., on Sunday, Oct. 12, from wounds received at the battle of Bull Run, Aug. 30, ALLAN NESBITT WILSON, of Company I, Fifth Regiment N. Y. V., (Duryee's Zouaves,) aged 19 years and 6 days.

The deceased was a son of Mr. A. N. Wilson, a well-known journalist attached while living to the New-Jersey Press. Shortly after the war broke out, he enlisted in the corps which has since acquired so much and merited distinction, serving in every principal engagement in Virginia, and always with the applause of his officers. Gen. Warren, referring to him some weeks since, in a letter to Major CARR, of the Second Battalion of the Fifth, remarked: "His conduct in all our battles has been brave and praiseworthy, and I think entitles him to promotion, if he is not physically disabled." The severe and protracted sufferings which preceded the young soldier's death were borne with heroic fortitude. The deceased had secured a broad circle of friends by his gentle, amiable, yet manly character. He was buried with military honors at Washington.

HUNTER has, for thirty years, confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated no less than fifty thousand cases, without an instance of failure. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures certain diseases, when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; cures without the dreadful consequent effects of mercury, but possesses the peculiarly valuable property of annihilating the rank and poisonous taint that the blood is sure to absorb, unless his remedy is used. This is what he claims for it, and what no other will accomplish. Its value in this respect has become so well known, that scientific men in every department of medical knowledge begin to appreciate it, for hardly a week passes that he is not consulted by druggists, chemists and physicians, in regard to some pitiful patient, who has exhausted the whole field of the faculty, and still the disease will appear. Its popularity is so great, that there is not a quack doctor in the City that has not attacked it; and when they find their lies are not so easily swallowed, they then pretend that they can make it. It is $1 a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 3 Division-st. Book for 15 three-cent stamps, 300 pages, 100 colored illustrations. The best work out.

THE PIRATE ALABAMA.

Her Operations in the Track of Vessels Going to England.

The Ship Brilliant, of Boston Destroyed by Her.

Another Ship, Name Unknown, Burnt.

Eleven Vessels in all Known to Have Been Destroyed.

Statement of Capt. Hagar, of the Brilliant.

DESCRIPTION OF THE PIRATE.

Capt. HAGAR, of the ship Brilliant, Capt. TILTON, of the bark Virginia, and Capt. GIFFORD, of the bark E. Dunbar, vessels destroyed by the pirate steamer Alabama, or "290," have arrived at this port.

Capt. HAGAR, late of the ship Brilliant, reports that he was from New-York, bound to London. On the morning of Oct. 3, in lat. 40°, lon. 50° 30', the wind from northeast, a large ship in company about a mile to windward, a steamer was seen on the weather bow, standing to the westward, under sail. The steamer, on nearing the ship to the windward, ran up at her peak the St. George's Cross, and in a few minutes after fired a gun across her bow, at the same time displaying the Confederate flag. The American colors were set, and the ship hove to, and a boat from the steamer went alongside. The steamer then wore round, and made sail for the Brilliant. We set our colors, and, on the steamer nearing us, fired a gun across our stern, when we hove to. A boat was then sent alongside, with two officers and a boat's crew, all armed; and on reaching the deck of the ship, claimed her a prize to the Confederate steamer Alabama, Capt. SEMMES, with orders for me to go in the boat to the steamer, with all my ship's papers.

On arriving on board, after waiting a while, was asked in the cabin to have my papers examined. The ship not having any documents to prove that her cargo was on foreign account, the papers and cargo were confiscated. I was then ordered on board the ship to assist with my crew and boats in removing such stores and cargo as they wanted for their own use, and to bring my officers and crew, with but a small bag of clothing each, on board the steamer, as they would not be lumbered up with our baggage. On arriving back to the steamer with my crew, was ordered to the other vessel, which proved to be the ship Emily Farnham of Portsmouth, N. H., Capt. SIMMS, from New-York for Liverpool. This ship was claimed as a prize, and the Captain was on board the steamer having his papers examined.

Documents being found among them to show that his cargo was on English account, his ship was released.

On board the steamer were the Captains, officers and crews (fifty-four in all) of the whaling barks Virginia and Elisha Dunbar, of New-Bedford, captured and burned at sea. Both these crews, with those of the Brilliant, were put on board the Emily Farnham, after being paroled. During the remainder of the day the steamer's officers and crew were plundering the Brilliant of her cargo and stores, and everything they chose to take. All Capt. HAGAR'S private property, such as his chronometer, sextant, barometer, charts, books, &c., and a large part of his clothing, were taken from him—the officers of the steamer claiming everything. During the afternoon, a large ship was in sight to the southward, heading to the eastward, and they had their eyes upon her.

It was now nearly or quite calm, and continued so during the night. At sunset the Brilliant was fired and at 7 P. M. was in flames, fore and aft, the E. F. lying about a mile from her. The ship continued to burn all night. In the morning the steamer was close at hand, and the ship seen the afternoon before had worked up to the burning wreck during the night, probably with the expectation of saving life, but at daylight found herself in the clutches of her destroyer. It continued calm nearly all day, and but a light air during the night. Toward midnight a bright light was seen in the direction of the steamer, and it is more than probable if was from the third ship.

Three of the crew of the Brilliant (all Englishmen) volunteered on the Alabama.

The E. F. continued on her voyage, but having the officers and crews of three burned vessels (68 in all) besides her own, had not water enough. On the 6th inst. fell in with the brig Golden Lead, of Thomaston, Capt. SMITH, who kindly consented to take on board eight of the number. The remainder would be put on board vessels as fallen in with. (See card below.)

The Brilliant was built by SAMUEL HALL, and launched at East Boston in November, 1860. Was 839 tons register, and with her freight and outfits was valued at $80,000. Rated A 1. She was owned by Messrs. J. ATKINS & Co., of New-York, and Capt. HAGAR. All the property Capt. H. possessed was in the ship, and not having the war risk in his insurance, has lost everything.

The Brilliant had no guns.

The following was her cargo: 5,231 bbls. Flour, 30,456 bushels Wheat, 43 tierces Beef, 26 bbls. Pork, 8 tierces Pork, 27,424 pounds Tallow, 19,958 pounds Butter, 6,043 gallons Lard Oil, 242 bags Cocoa; 12,200 pounds Bacon, 9 hhds. Pork Heads, 8,640 Staves.

DESCRIPTION OF THE ALABAMA.

The Alabama was built at Liverpool or Birkenhead, and left the latter port in August last. Is about 1,000 tons burden; draft about 14 feet; Engines by LAIRD & SONS, of Birkenhead—1862. She is a wooden vessel, propelled by screw; coppered bottom; about 210 feet long; rather narrow; painted black outside and drab inside; has a round stern, billet head, very little sheer, flush deck fore and aft, a bridge forward of the smoke-stack; carries two large, black boats on cranes midships, forward of the main rigging; two black quarter-boats between the main and mizen masts; one small black boat over the stern on cranes. The spare spars, on a gallows between the bridge and foremast, show above the rail. She carries three long 32-pounders on a side, and is pierced for two more amidships; has a 100 pound rifled pivot-gun forward of the bridge, and a 68-pound pivot on the main deck; has tracks laid forward for a pivot bow gun, and tracks aft for a pivot stern-chaser—all of which she will take on board to complete her armament. Her guns are of the Blakely pattern, and manufactured by Messrs. WESLEY & PRESTON, Liverpool, 1862. She is bark rigged, has very long bright lower masts and black mastheads, yards black, long yardarms, short poles, (say one to two feet,) with small dog-vanes on each, and a pendant to the main. Studding sails, booms on the fore and main, and has wire rigging. Carries on her foremast a square foresail, large trysail with two reefs, and a bonnet topsail, with two reefs, topgallantsail and royal. On the mainmast, a large trysail, with two reefs and a bonnet. No square mainsail bent, topsail, two reefs, topgallant sail and royal. On the mizzenmast, a very large spanker and a short three-cornered gafftopsail. Has a fore and foretopmast staysail and jib. Has had no staysails to the main or mizzen masts bent, or royal yards aloft.

She is represented to go thirteen knots under canvas, and fifteen under steam; can get steam in twenty minutes, but seldom uses it, except in a chase or an emergency. Has all national flags, but usually sets the St. George's Cross on approaching a vessel. Her present complement of men is 120, all told, but is anxious to ship more. Keeps a man at the masthead from daylight to sunset.

Her sails are of hemp canvas, made very rushing; the topsails have twenty cloths on the head and thirty on the foot. General appearance of the hull and sails decidedly English. She is generally under two topsails, fore and main topsails, fore and fore topmast staysails—sometimes topgallantsails and jib—but seldom any sails on the mizzen, except while in chase of a vessel. She is very slow in stays, generally wears ship. She was built expressly for the business. She is engaged to destroy, fight or run, as the character of her opponent may be. She took her armament and crew, and most of her officers on board, near Terceira, Western Islands, from an English vessel. Her crew are principally English; the officers chivalry of the South.

All the water consumed on board is condensed. She has eight months provisions, besides what is being plundered, and has about 400 tons coal on board.

The following are the names of her officers:

Capt. SEMMES, Commander-in-Chief. First Lieutenant, Kell; Second Lieutenant, Armstrong; Third Lieutenant, Wilson; Fourth Lieutenant, Low; Sailing Master, Sinclair; Lieutenant of Marines, Howell, brother-in-law of Jeff. Davis; Corporal, Fulam; Gunner, Curdy; Captain's Clerk, Smith; Midshipmen, Mamit, Sinclair, Bullock; Chief Engineer, Freeman; Carpenter, Robinson; Boatswain, McCaskie; Doctor, Surgeon, &c., unknown.

IMPORTANT FROM KENTUCKY.

Humphrey Marshall Reported to be Retreating.

Probable Defeat of Kirby Smith's Forces.

BRAGG BEING HARD PRESSED.

The Rebels Everywhere Getting the Worst of it.

LOUISVILLE, Thursday, Oct. 16.

Innumerable authenticated rumors are afloat this evening. Amohg them, that HUMPHREY MARSHALL, with his whole force, is retreating toward Irvin, Estell County, with Brig.-Gen. A. J. SMITH after him.

Quite a number of rebels, without arms, arrived at Richmond last night, reporting that their forces had been thoroughly whipped.

They say that KIRBY SMITH'S force, on the morning of the 15th, was drawn up in line of battle at Big Hill, eighteen miles south-east of Richmond. At Lexington heavy firing was heard all day, indicating the retreat of the rebels, and the sharp pursuit by our forces.

Rumors were current at Lexington that a detachment of our men had separated JOHN MORGAN'S band in two parts, which were trying to concentrate and retreat in the direction of Gallatin.

Gen. CRITTENDEN'S command is said to have captured 50 beeves and 100 wagons on Tuesday from the rebels.

Gen. BUELL'S main army passed through Crab Orchard at 11 o'clock yesterday morning, and, if unimpeded by skirmishers, must be near Rock Castle River, while BRAGG'S main force is supposed to be near Loudon.

At headquarters, as far as advised, it is thought BUELL is pressing the enemy's rear sharply, and that the foregoing reports relate to skirmishes along the enemy's rear. BUELL will force them to fight, or capture their whole army.

S. D. BRUCE, Colonel commanding at Bowling Green, says we have thrashed the rebels at Springfield and Keysburgh, breaking up their camp. Their camp at Trenton will be attacked to-morrow. WOODWARD is at Trenton with 500 men. JOHNSON has gone to Caseyville.

THOS. D. CARR, Sheriff of Fayette County, brings a report to Lexington of a heavy fight yesterday, from 6 o'clock in the morning till 11 at night, between Lexington, in which the rebels were utterly repulsed, they throwing away their arms and accoutrements by thousands. We captured 800 cattle, a large number of arms and quite a number of prisoners.

THE BATTLE AT PERRYVILLE.

Opening of the Engagement—Disposition of the National Forces—Position of the Confederates—Topography of the Battle-field—Scenes on the Battle-field.

From Our Own Correspondent.

FIELD OF BATTLE, NEAR PERRYVILLE, KY., Thursday, Oct. 9, 1862.

Among the bloodiest of all the bloody dramas of this war has just been enacted. We left our camp on the morning of the 8th, at 7 o'clock, taking a hilly, dusty road across the country, which, leading in a northwesterly direction, entered the Harrodsburgh turnpike, about two miles from the village of Perryville, which we approached from the southeast, or perhaps a little east of southeast. Gens. McCOOK and ROUSSEAU, with GILBERT'S corps, had in the meantime taken the MAXVILLE road across the country toward Perryville, approaching the village from the northwest. Early in the day, on the 8th, it became apparent that a general battle would be fought at Perryville, as all the information we could gain showed that the rebels had massed their principal forces at that point. Just as we entered the Harrodsburgh road, which runs through Perryville, the boom of cannon was heard from the enemy's position ahead of us. Our ranks were quickly closed, and the columns hastened forward. Soon we met a large number of women and children, who were hurrying from the town to seek safety from the effects of the engagement. The ladies were much frightened, and beseeched us to save the houses, which they said would be destroyed by the rebels. On nearing the town the cannonading became more frequent, and all our wagons and ambulances were ordered to the rear. Soon after this, some of our cavalry, which had been scouting in advance and driving the enemy before them all day, came riding to the rear, bleeding profusely, having been wounded in a severe encounter with the enemy, which they reported in very heavy force on the hills surrounding the town of Perryville. The cavalry who were wounded had received bullet wounds in the hands and arms; they went to the rear for surgical assistance. Our troops now divested themselves of blankets and all incumbrances, some weapons and cartridge-boxes, and at a double-quick hastened forward. On reaching the hills about one mile from the town, a six-pounder of the enemy opened on us from the right. The division of Gen. VAN CLEVE was immediately drawn up in line of battle, and the batteries of DRURY, MULER and SWALLOW were placed in position upon the hills. The Eleventh Brigade, commanded by Col. BEATTY, consisting of the Fifty-ninth Ohio, Col. TIPPE; the Nineteenth Ohio, Col. HOLLINGSWORTH; the Ninth Kentucky, Col. GRIDER; the Thirteenth Kentucky, Col. HOBSON, and the Seventy-ninth Indiana, Col. KNEFLER, took a position in a corn-field, skirted by a thick wood full of briars and underbrush. The Fourteenth Brigade filed into line on the left, and the other brigade formed to the right and supported the artillery in reserve. The division of Gen. SMITH took a position in the wood, his line extending at an angle from CRUFT'S Division, his left resting upon our right. Soon SMITH'S batteries were thundering hoarse and menacing responses to the cannon of the enemy, which had opened to our left. Heavy skirmishing forces were now thrown forward of our advance into the wood, and soon the sharp crack of musketry was ringing in our ears, and bullets came with a whiz and a hiss through the woods and among the trees.

Our skirmishers were warmly engaged, and both sides fired with fierceness and rapidity. Again the enemy fired the artillery to our right, and again the guns of SMITH hurtle forward their stern and death-dealing answers. The fire of musketry now became incessant, and it was evident that the enemy was in heavy force in our front, or he had a strong cavalry and infantry force reconnoitring, with the view of flanking us, or holding us in check, while their main force engaged McCOOK and ROUSSEAU, west of us and about two and a half miles to our left, as we stood in line of battle. As the skirmishing became more severe, our infantry was thrown forward to their support, and a general engagement appeared to be about taking place. Suddenly, as we stood on our arms, the men chafing for fight, the thunders of artillery was heard to our left. It continued louder and more severe, until the roar became incessant and deafening. Our skirmishing, though it had been quite sharp and prolonged, resulted in the killing of several rebels, among them one Captain, now ceased. While vigilantly watching the enemy in our immediate front, every ear was strained with impatient anxiety to catch the sounds of cannon to the left. The very hills now began to shake and tremble under the shock of the guns. They continued to become louder and continuous. Presently crash, crash, came the sounds of musketry from the left. GILBERT'S corps, with McCOOK and ROUSSEAU, had approached toward the town and engaged the rebels on the left. The battle had opened in earnest in that quarter. Thither let us direct our attention. The rebels, in what force it was impossible to conjecture, were posted between us and the town. Their forces were both cavalry and infantry, and were so disposed as to create the impression on the minds of our division that their main strength was posted on the side of the town next to us, and that they would dispute our advance at every hazard. This impression was strengthened by the occasional discharge of artillery to our right, and the heavy skirmishing force that approached to our very lines. The position we held was an important one, either for cautious advances or for preventing the enemy's retreat by the main Harrodsburgh road. Several had already been killed by our skirmishers, with no loss to ourselves. Our men stood to their arms, eagerly expecting an attack from the enemy.

But to the battle on our left: The enemy, full forty thousand strong, had concentrated their forces on the west side of the Harrodsburgh road, one mile north of the village of Perryville, and possessed themselves of a large cave spring, which at this dry season affords about the only water sufficient for an army in that whole region. To hold this spring, and cut us off from water, forcing us back toward Springfield, was a part of their tactics. On our part, the possession of the big spring was of vital importance, and the defeat of the rebels at their chosen position, a darling object. Their camps extended for miles along the Harrodsburgh road, stretching back over the deep shaded and sloping hills to the northwest, being well supplied with water from the spring alluded to. Their camping ground was admirably chosen, and the position selected for the battle the best for defensive operations I have ever seen. It would be well to state that the people through this region are mostly rebels, and ready at any time to act as spies, guides, and informers of our movements. In this way, through rebel citizens who are acquainted with every hill, road and by-path, they are kept thoroughly posted as to our movements and designs. They were apprized of the movement of GILBERT'S corps, with McCOOK and ROUSSEAU, along the MAXWELL road from the region of Bardstown, and the advance of Gen. CRITTENDEN'S corps along the Springfield and Harrodsburgh road, and took prompt measures to prevent destruction as we closed in upon them. They succeeded. The brigade of infantry and cavalry sent out the Harrodsburgh road to the south, and the pieces of artillery planted to our right, kept CRITTENDEN in check, skirmishing and making slow approaches, while the rebel main forces engaged Gen. GILBERT'S corps to the northwest on the north side of Perryville.

When McCOOK and ROUSSEAU, therefore, appeared before the town, they found the immense forces of the enemy most advantageously posted to meet them. The rebels were posted on a long range of hills, extending in a crescent form from north to west, the termini of the crescent being almost due north and due west, with its inner centre precisely northwest. This semi-circular range of hills formed their advance, and on these hills the rebel Generals exhorted their soldiers to dye their colors deep in the blood of the enemy rather than surrender them. These hills are about a mile and a half from Perryville. Behind this range of hills, and between them and the big spring, there are two other high hills, along the left base of which is a cornfield, and along the right base the tortuous course of the Spring, to the right of which is the extensive and finely shaded woodland forming their camping grounds. Running off through the cornfield, and angling a little south of west, beyond the western terminus of the advance crescent, there is a strong stone fence, behind which the enemy posted a part of the infantry. Under the brow of the semi-circular range of hills, the rebel batteries were placed in admirable position, sustained by their infantry—who could fire with destructive effect, and then screen themselves behind the hills and among the grass and weeds. In front of the enemy's right there is a narrow valley of meadow-land, after descending which you come into a skirt-woods. Facing the enemy's centre there was a cornfield, which extended, a little broken, for several hundred yards back to the woods. Facing the stone fence is a stretch of waste land, gently sloping parallel with the fence to the woods. Behind the fence there is heavy timber. The rebels were commanded by their chosen and favorite Generals. BRAGG was on the field in person, and assumed general command. BUCKNER led the centre, HARDEE the right, and POLK the left wing. Gen. CHEATHAM had the reserve, while Gen. BROWN and a host of other Brigadiers, cheered and led on their commands. This Gen. BROWN is the same Col. BROWN who commanded the Third Tennessee Regiment at Fort Donelson, and who, with BUCKNER, surrendered, and served a term at Fort Warren. Since his exchange he has received a Brigadier-General's commission. He is, I believe, a nephew of NIEL S. BROWN, of Tennessee. So much for the position of the enemy. Now let us look at our own.

The approach of GILBERT'S Corps, with McCOOK, ROUSSEAU and MITCHELL, was well known to the rebels. Our men had made forced marches through heat and dust, over a rough road, and through a country utterly destitute of water. Their arrival in the morning was hailed by a shell from the enemy's battery. Notwithstanding the formidable array before us, and notwithstanding the advantages of position the enemy had, our men prepared for action. HARRIS' Battery was planted on our left, LOOMIS' on the right, with PARSON'S and SIMONTON'S between the two. McCOOK was chief in command on the field, and ROUSSEAU, second. Gen. JACKSON, with his Brigade, was posted on the left, ROUSSEAU in the centre, while the right was led by Gen. MITCHELL. We opened upon the rebels at 1 o'clock, P. M., on the 8th. The most sanguinary battle of the war commenced. The enemy opened all their batteries upon us. Soon the whole rebel artillery let their guns loose upon us. The hills shook to their base, as one livid sheet of flame poured across them. Shell would whiz through the air, fall at the point of their aim and burst, dealing death all around. Solid shot went screaming across the field, cutting great gaps through the ranks. Mingling with the terrific roar of cannon, now the shrill hiss of grape and canister, thinning out the troops—literally mowing them down, and piling them in mangled swaths over the field and across the hills. Next come the crash of musketry, quick, loud and incessant. The noise of these guns blended with that of the artillery in tumultuous roar. Never, perhaps, was there a battle fought at so short a range, and never were fires so murderous and destructive. The battle commenced at 1 o'clock and had reached its height at 3. For an hour now it was a succession of advances and repulses, first one side advancing and then falling back before their infuriated pursuers. On the right, a desperate attempt was made to flank the reinforcing columns of McCOOK, which was for a time partially successful, some of the new regiments wavering and staggering under the galling cross fires poured upon them. The scene was terrific. Dense smoke rolled all over the field, while the hills were literally enveloped in sheets of fire. The thunder of cannon and the crash of musketry can be compared to nothing I have ever heard. The simultaneous falling and splitting of a thousand forest trees might perhaps be something like it.

HARRIS' Battery which, as stated, was posted on our right, poured grape and canister into the ranks of the advancing rebels, and literally paved the slope with their dead bodies. Yet, on and on came these fierce rebels, over heaps of dead of their own, to within forty yards of that death-dealing battery. Again and again would they recoil with decimated ranks from the terrible machines of death. Determined yet to take that battery, they charged down the slope and through the hollow, diagonally across, from toward the centre, and there one of the regiments supporting it fell into confusion. Still the battery maintained its ground, right in the face of fearful odds; and again the rebels were driven back with fearful slaughter. PARSON'S Battery, to the right of HARRIS', in the meantime had been dealing destruction in the ranks of the foe. The enemy, in overwhelming numbers, and with determined exasperation, closed in upon this battery and succeeded in capturing it. They subsequently spiked the guns and cut the wagon-wheels to pieces. In taking this battery the rebels lost fearfully, our men fighting like heroes against their superior advance. In the early part of the action, Gen. JAMES S. JACKSON was killed. He was coolly giving some order on the left. He and Gen. ROUSSEAU had been in conversation. ROUSSEAU turned toward the centre, and JACKSON deliberately lighted a cigar; just as he had lighted it, a ball from the enemy struck him, killing him almost instantly. JACKSON was a member of the National Congress from the Second District of Kentucky. He resigned his seat to draw his sword for Constitutional liberty. The nation mourns no truer patriot; the army no braver soldier. About this time, also, Col. TERRELL, one of the bravest and most skillful officers of the service, fell mortally wounded, while engaged in pointing a battery under fire of the enemy. The First Wisconsin, Col. STARKWEATHER, had engaged the First Tennessee rebel regiment on the left, and warm work was going on. The ground was sharply and gallantly contested for hours, with apparently no decisive results, the fire of the First Wisconsin thinning the ranks of the enemy at every round.

The Twenty-third Indiana, toward the centre, covered itself with honors. Their flag was planted near the centre of the field, and the regiment was raked by the crescent-shaped batteries and cross-fires from the rebels. Their ammunition gave out, and they heroically threw themselves upon their faces, the balls of the enemy passing over them in a perfect shower. This regiment suffered severely, one-third of its men being killed or disabled. Their flag was riddled into strings and shreds, and its staff splintered by the enemy's bullets. Yet they kept it waving, and preserve its torn fragments as a memorial of their bravery upon that bloody day. McCOOK and ROUSSEAU both pronounced this a much more hotly-contested fight, and the fires much severer, than they were at any time at Shiloh. The Twenty-third Indiana was now happily relieved. Further to the right the immortal Tenth Ohio, of the Seventeenth Brigade, under Col. LYTLE, who was acting Brigadier, stood their ground firmly for hours in a perfect rain-storm of shot and shell. At length their leader, the high-souled and heroic LYTLE, fell dangerously wounded. The Tenth Ohio was now withdrawn. The battery of Capt. LOOMIS, which had all day plied the enemy in heaps, was now threatened by the enemy who were throwing their dense columns forward with a view of surrounding and capturing it. The battery was withdrawn toward the wood, but continued to hurl its leaden death-messages at the enemy. A part of GILBERT'S command now came superbly into action on the left, driving the enemy before them, though suffering heavily from the fire poured upon them from the stone fence. Gen. WEBSTER was in the meantime killed, as was also Col. JOURNY, of the Fifteenth Kentucky. The first advantage gained by the enemy in the centre was by one of those acts of perfidy which they have never been slow to exhibit. A rebel Colonel, with National uniform on, advanced along to the centre, where the brave Indianians were exposed, and shouted, "Hurrah for the old Hoosier boys!" He was met as a comrade, and by deception the rebels were permitted to advance to within a few yards of our men. A most unexpected and murderous fire was poured upon us from two sides, without our regiment even returning it. The Indiana boys were of course stunned, and thrown into temporary confusion. The battle having raged fiercely now for five hours, and the men being exhausted with slaughter, just as night began to conceal the field of death and of blood, the combatants ceased their awful work. Our troops fell back a short distance under cover of the woods, worn and exhausted with their hot day's work. A portion of the rebels held possession of the larger part of the battle-field. We had but twelve thousand troops on the field, which contended with the combined rebe forces, fully forty thousand strong.

The work of death was tremendous. We rode over the battle-field. The rebels withdrew their entire forces during the night, leaving in a great hurry in the direction of Harrodsburgh and Danville. They secured their baggage trains and supplies. The scenes on the battle-field beggar all description. Men were piled in heaps, torn by shell and ball into every conceivable shape. The poor Alabama conscripts were forced to the cannon's mouth, with the sabres of rebel cavalry at their backs. We saw some boys not over fourteen in the cold sleep of death, mangled by balls. Poor boys! Our men lay in large numbers unburied upon the field, though trench and grave digging had commenced for the solemn work of burial. All the shoes and boots were taken from our dead, and their pockets were turned by the rebels and rifled. The rebels had taken their dead and wounded mostly from the field. Their dead can be found piled all over the woods in a state of putrefaction and decomposition. The stench is becoming terrible in the woods and ravines. In one place we saw twenty-two dead rebels, horribly mangled, lying in the woods, where they had been carried, and left unburied by their ungrateful and heartless comrades. At another place, we saw seventeen piled together in a rude pen, terribly mangled, and smelling very offensive. In one house on the roadside, there are seventy-five rebels dead and dying, and in another near a hundred and fifty. The country is one living hospital, and the woods filled with unburied dead. It is difficult to estimate, without reliable data, with accuracy, the losses sustained on either side. Beside Gen. JACKSON, and Acting-Brigadier-Generals JOURTT, LYTLE, TERRELL and WEBSTER, we lost a large number of field officers. The Tenth Ohio, the Twenty-third Indiana, the First Wisconsin, the Fifteenth Kentucky, and the Tenth Wisconsin, suffered severely in both officers and men. Our loss in killed will reach between four and five hundred, while our total loss in killed and wounded and missing, will number between three and four thousand. We lost, perhaps, more killed on the field, than did the enemy, though their wounded and prisoners far exceeded ours. Their wounded, too, are sevesely wounded, and will die rapidly. Some of their regiments were almost annihilated. The Fifth Florida Regiment was nearly all cut to pieces. One Captain of this regiment went into the battle, his company numbering sixty; he lost all but six of his men, and was himself severely wounded. Several regiments and parts of regiments, which had been forced into the rebel service, threw down their arms and retired at the commencement of the action. Enough guns, most of them loaded, were found down the rear of the spring, to arm two or three regiments. Many of the rebel guns are Enfield rifles; and the directions for loading, which I send you, signed "ELEY & BRO., London," show where their ammunition comes from. The flight of the enemy was precipitate, though it must have been orderly, as nearly all their heavy trains and all their artillery were saved. We now desire to call attention to what may be called the mismanagement of the day. While our forces were so fiercely fighting the enemy's superior numbers, the divisions of Gens. SMITH, VAN CLEVE and WARD, of CRITTENDEN'S Corps, with their artillery, were standing in line of battle not more than two miles off. Nothing but the brigade of infantry and the rebel skirmishing cavalry before mentioned, prevented us from joining in the fight. The corps of CRITTENDEN could have swept along the Harrodsburgh road, passed Perryville, turned the enemy's flank, and fallen upon his rear with crushing effect. Our subordinate officers and men were panting to be led forward. Yet there they stood for four mortal hours, in hearing of the guns that were answering the enemy, and [illegible] from throwing down our comrades. We had overtaken the enemy, but were held back, and not allowed to fight. Had this corps moved directly forward, the victory would have been complete, resulting in the discomfiture of the rebel army, and the capture of their supply trains and artillery. As it was, they have retired and safely conveyed their valuables with them. Now, you ask was the battle of the 8th a victory? We answer that we do not regard it so. Our fearful loss of life, the loss of a battery, and the lives of so many valuable officers, is hardly remunerated by the capture of a barren hill, the killing of five or six hundred wretched rebels, and the taking of a lot of guns and prisoners. Had our attack been in concert and simultaneously, a victory in all its completeness would have been ours. We were certainly not defeated; the enemy was forced to abandon their positions, with the loss of several wagons and a large number of prisoners. The houses beyond our lines are converted into hospitals for our wounded, who are being well cared for.

AFFAIRS ON THE MISSISSIPPI.

Operations of the Guerrillas—The Steamer Hazel Dell Robbed—Two Ordnance Transports Destroyed by Fire at Columbus.

CAIRO, Ill., Thursday, Oct. 16.

The rebel force which robbed the steamer Hazel Dell yesterday, at Caseyville, Ky., commanded by Cols. ANDERSON, JOHNSON and MARTIN, is supposed to have numbered 2,000. They took about $3,000 worth of clothing, groceries and powder, and threatened to burn all the boats falling into their hands after the first of the month.

Two transports, the Admiral and Philadelphia, laden with ordnance stores, were burned at Columbus to-day.

The fire originated in the cabin of the Admiral, and is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary.

While the Admiral was burning she floated against the Philadelphia. A thousand kegs of powder were taken from the latter before she was destroyed.

During the conflagration several hundred shells exploded on the Admiral tearing her to pieces.

Many houses in town were struck.

Gen. DODGE was slightly wounded by a fragment of a shell.

The loss is estimated at seventy-five thousand dollars.

The expedition which left here last night for Ballard County, Ky., has returned with five prisoners, and also captured a number of horses and mules.

CAIRO, Thursday, Oct. 16.

The rebels are still at work up the Ohio River. They stole fifteen negroes from the steamer Cordelia, yesterday, above Smithland.

The rebels camped on Tuesday night four miles from Caseyville. Col. WHITNEY'S Regiment, from Shawneetown, started in pursuit of them yesterday. The steamer Exchange also landed 600 infantry and two pieces of artillery above Caseyville on Tuesday, and they are also pursuing them.

The mail taken from the steamer Hazel Dell has been recovered.

An arrival from Helena says that last Saturday a battalion of the Second Wisconsin Cavalry went out on the St. Francis road to Lagrange, where they were attacked by the Twenty seventh Texas Rangers and driven back ten miles, when the First Missouri came to their assistance. Twelve rebels were captured, including a Lieutenant-Colonel. The health of the troops at Helena is improving.

Scouting Expeditions—A Rebel Officer Captured—An Export Duty of Ten per Cent. on Cotton and Hides.

The following items are from the Newbern Progress of the 6th inst.:

A party under command of Lieut. NUTTING, recently left Washington, N. C., on the steamer Eagle, for Pungo River. On arriving in the vicinity of the late fire, they captured a rebel soldier, who had just arrived on a furlough from Wilmington, and also an officer of the rebel army, who was collecting conscripts by order of the rebel commandant of this Department. They were sent to Newbern and arrived here last evening on the Eagle.

On Thursday a party of some twenty-five guerrillas visited the premises of Messrs. BERRS and SPRINGER, on Pungo River, and burned their houses, mills and stores, consuming a large quantity of lumber, tar, &c. This spite is supposed to arise from the fact that Mr. SPRINGER is the Quartermaster of the First North Carolina Union Volunteers.

Eleven prisoners arrived here last evening on the Eagle from Washington, N. C. They were captured in the late attack on that place, in which they were wounded.

From the Newbern Progress of the 8th instant we extract the following:

"On Sunday evening last, Lieut.-Col. MANCHESTER, of the Marine Artillery, with a detachment of sixty men, were ordered on board the Allison, to proceed to Smith's Creek, about thirty miles below Newbern, on the north side of the Neuse, to arrest an officer of the rebel army, who was supposed to be collecting conscripts in that vicinity. The expedition arrived near the creek about 10 o'clock in the evening, and landed. After marching about twelve miles, and searching several houses, they captured Lieut.-Col. W. H. SNELL, of the Fifteenth North Carolina, and Capt. SALTERS, of the same regiment. It seems that Lieut.-Col. SNELL had been troubled with premonitions of coming danger, and had repeatedly changed his quarters within the last few hours, but with no avail. His horse and equipments were also secured. The capture is a very important one, as the Colonel has been very active in raising rebel troops, and possessed great influence."

STYLE AND BEAUTY COMBINED.—No matter how widely people may differ in regard to politics or religion, the great majority agree as to what is or is not beautiful. There is something about a well-designed, well-made and becoming hat that commands universal admiration. Such a hat is the Fall style issued by KNOX, at No. 212 Broadway. No sane mortal can help admiring a hat that combines such style and beauty as this.
